AMERICA IN THE STONE AGE

When Columbus Came Few of Its Inhabitants Knew the Use of Metals.

When Columbus landed at San Salvador, nearly all North America was in the Stone age. The Mexicans were using copper, and though they did not alloy it to make bronze, they treated the metal in a way to make it a fairly good cutting material. A few of the northern tribes of Indians either worked copper or traded for it. But the vast majority of them used stone—and this in a continent richer than any other in easily found and smelted copper and iron. In northern Michigan, copper mines were found with blocks of ore separated from the bed vein—yet the natives who hunted around these mines used flint arrowheads.

The stone implements and weapons used by the Mohawk chief in the days of Columbus were not a whit better than those used by the Cro-Magnon people of France 25,000 years ago. Moreover, these ancient Frenchmen seem to have arrived in that country with their culture full grown—which means that it must have had a long, slow development elsewhere, probably in Asia.

The Days That Are Gone.

"You used to say," she complained, "that you counted that day lost when you did not hear the sound of my voice."

"Yes, I know," he replied, "and I shall never cease to long for those dear lost days."—Boston Transcript.

"By Hook or by Crook."

"By hook or by crook," an expression denoting that a person is determined to accomplish a certain thing, no matter how, was first used in Ireland in 1172. At that time, Strongbow, the great warrior, invaded Ireland and swore he would take it "by hook or crook," meaning two towns of great importance in those days near the port of Waterford.

Some authorities, however, claim that Strongbow was using a punning allusion. Ancient forest rights in England and Ireland allowed the poor to carry away dead or damaged wood for fuel. The people were not permitted to use an ax or a saw but were supposed to pick up the loose branches scattered about. The customary method of removal was to use hooked poles or "crooks" with which the dead branches could be pulled down and hauled home.

In the old English records this privilege of the poor is called "a right with hook and crook to lop, crop and carry away fuel."

THE ELMIRA BOOMERS.

A staff correspondent of the Elmira Star-Gazette accompanied the wholesalers of that city on their trip last week. Of the visit to Penn Yan on Thursday, Friday's Gazette said:

"In extending a welcome on behalf of the Chamber of Commerce, the President, Walter B. Tower, said:

'We have no key to Penn Yan, for our gates are always open to people from Elmira and everywhere else, but I wish to state that not only the merchants but every citizen here extends a most cordial welcome.' He also called attention to the fact that Penn Yan was not standing still as a business place. He told how the citizens had been able to secure a clothing factory for Penn Yan.

'We now are in need of workmen and we want them at once. When you go back to Elmira please let it be known that Penn Yan can use 25 stonemasons and 25 carpenters at once. We want these men to work during the summer and until late in the fall. We have the work for them here and if they will come here ready to go to work they will not be disappointed. We are more than pleased to tell you that we have work for every mason and carpenter in Penn Yan and vicinity and have to send outside of Yates county for more men.' This statement by President Tower was greeted by applause.

'Not only do we need masons and carpenters,' he continued, 'but we are in need of 150 girls to work in the new clothing factory which is soon to open here. The secretary of our Chamber of Commerce will be pleased to receive applications from girls wishing employment.'

Frank E. Tripp, of The Elmira Star-Gazette, told of several interesting incidents of the trip and complimented the citizens of Penn Yan on the excellent appearance of the entire village.

State Senator Seymour Lowman, representing the United States Cut Flower Company, of Elmira, said that he had learned that the deposits in the banks of Penn Yan were far ahead of the deposits in the Elmira banks pro rata to the population and congratulated the citizens of this place on their business ability and thrift. He complimented the local Chamber of Commerce and citizens for securing another new industry for Penn Yan and said there was no reason why the place should not continue to grow and prosper with such excellent officials, civic organizations and citizens.

Boy Walks Fifty Miles to Lake Keuka.

Hornell, June 12.—A walking feat that will stamp him as a second Weston has been accomplished by William Howard, the 12-year-old son of Ernest Howard, of No. 17 Bostwick St., who covered on foot the fifty miles between his home and Crystal Beach, Lake Keuka, Saturday between dawn and midnight. The boy pulled along a handcart in which he carried all the paraphenalia he wanted to use during his outing at the lake.

It all happened as the result of the automobile in which William's parents and some friends were riding to the lake not being big enough to hold William and his fishing tackle. After William, who had hoped to be squeezed in, found that he would have to lose several days at the lake, while awaiting the completion of other arrangements to get him there, he formed the idea of walking to cut down the space of time that separated him from sheer joy. He got early start, accordingly, and used his cart in which to coast down all the hills. At no time did he get a ride by automobile.

His father, asleep in preparation for an early morning fishing trip, was startled when he was aroused by the boy's knock at the cottage door at midnight Saturday, but he was amazed when he heard of the son's accomplishment.

Resigns after Twenty-Four Years of Service.

Miss Anne Purdy resigned from active service with the New York Telephone Company, effective June 10. Miss Purdy recently had a serious operation and has not fully recovered and feels the need of a thorough rest. About June 27th she leaves for Seattle, Washington, to remain a year with her brother, Clinton. She will be accompanied by her niece, Miss Elizabeth Purdy.

Twenty four years ago, when Miss Purdy started as operator, chief operator and cashier, the office of the telephone company was located over Peck's hardware store. Later it moved over the dry goods store of Lynch-Fuller Corporation, and when the two companies were consolidated and new offices and equipment were installed in the Arcade, Miss Purdy was placed in charge of the commercial department, on the east side of Main street, next to Donaldson, Hess & Co., where she has been since.

Miss Purdy is still considered in the employ of the telephone company and with another year may retire on the pension schedule. She has served this company longer than any other of its employes in Penn Yan, with the exception of Robert Lunney, trouble manager, whose record with this company now is nearly 35 years. —Chronicle.

SEIZE LOAD OF CHAMPAGNE.

Two hundred and forty cases of champagne, valued at ten thousand dollars was seized at the Hammondsport wine cellar just before daylight Tuesday morning, after it had been loaded onto a ten thousand dollar truck, said to belong to Brooklyn truckmen. The raid was directed by Sheriff Kellogg and carried out by Deputy Sheriff John Callan and Deputy Carl Adams, of Hammondsport.

The truckmen were ordered to drive with their cargo to the county jail in this village, where the champagne was put in the custody of the sheriff. The truckmen were taken before Police Judge Walter Longwell, and after a conference with their attorneys, Michael O'Connor, of Elmira, and Thomas F. Rogers, of Corning, their hearing was adjourned to Friday, June 23d. Each gave bail in the sum of $500 for appearance at the hearing. Attorney Rogers claims the champagne was being moved under authority of a permit.

Joseph Burman and Maurice Glickman, who were in charge of the truck, were the men arrested and brought to jail; four or five other men who were evidently interested in the cargo of the truck endeavored to argue with the deputies at the time of the arrest. Argument failing, these four or five men escaped in an automobile.

The wine seized is alleged to have been taken from the Hammondsport wine cellars and that property was placed under guard by Deputy Callan. The truck is lettered on its sides, "Skillman Trucking Company, Brooklyn, N. Y.," which warrants the assumption that the cargo was the intended for a New York City market.

When the cases were opened at the jail the bottles were found to carry the label, Rhelms, France, probably being intended for market as an imported wine.—Bath Courier.

"Why Lincoln Laughed."

When Abraham Lincoln breathed his last no truer words could have been spoken at that awful time than those of Edwin M. Stanton, who said, "Now he belongs to the ages."

After the lapse of more than 57 years since his death, the American people come to realize more and more what a marvelous man he was. He was too great a character to be justly or fairly estimated in life by the majority of the people. His career was so bound up in the Herculean endeavor to save a nation at war with itself that there was neither time nor opportunity to take a measure or form a just and true estimate of his matchless sagacity and far-seeing statesmanship.

Of Lincoln's personal characteristics, what he did and said, the people crave to know more and more continuously. His spontaneous and perennial good humor, cropping out through all occasions, revealed one of the kindest hearts that ever beat in human bosom. The people had only fairly begun to realize and appreciate the great, good, devoted, and unselfish man that he was when he was snatched away by the hand of a fiend in human shape, attested in the fact that no man was ever in this great country so thoroughly and universally mourned when he departed.

The American people love to dwell upon the fund of his spontaneous and perennial good humor. The day was never so dark that he could not find or devise some illuminating sunbeams in the midst of the thick and ominous clouds.

This happy phase of Lincoln's wonderful character is well considered and set forth in a neat volume of 143 pages prepared by Russell H. Conwell, published by Harper & Brothers, Franklin Square, New York, price $1.50, entitled "Why Lincoln Laughed."

It is a very interesting contribution to the philosophy and literature of laughter. It sets forth personal interviews with our greatest President in a refreshing manner.

Lincoln, alluding to the necessity of humorous manifestations in his position, sounds the keynote in saying: "It is a duty. I could defeat our whole army tomorrow by looking glum at a reception or by refusing to smile for three consecutive hours."

Here is a quotation from the work alluded to:

"One day when I was at the White House in conversation with Lincoln a man bustled in self-importantly and whispered something to him. As the man left the room Lincoln turned to me and smiled.

"He tells me that twelve thousand of Lee's soldiers have just been captured. But that doesn't mean anything; he's the biggest liar in Washington. He reminds me of an old fisherman I used to know, who got such a reputation for stretching the truth that he bought a pair of scales and insisted on weighing every fish in the presence of witnesses.

'One day a baby was born next door, and the doctor borrowed the fisherman's scales to weigh the baby. It weighed forty-seven pounds.'

"Lincoln threw back his head and laughed; so did I."

"Another story which Lincoln accredited to Artemas Ward, had to do with a visit the latter was supposed to have made in his uncouth clothes and manners to a fashionable evening party. Ward, not wishing to show the awkwardness he felt, stepped boldly up to an aristocratic lady and said, 'You are a very handsome woman.' The lady took it to be an insulting piece of rude flattery and replied spitefully, "I wish I could say the same thing of you." Whereupon Ward boldly remarked, "Well, you could if you were as big a liar as I am!"

The humorous Lincolnia literature, if it could be reproduced as faithfully and fully as Honest Abe related it, would make the most laughable volume ever issued.

Many War Frauds "Legal."

Few of the cases of imposition on the government during the war by contractors are susceptible of prosecution under the law. Where an army or civil official chosen to represent the government makes a fool contract with a contractor on the other, the arrangement may result in the government being robbed, but the robbery is legal and the participants in the agreement cannot be prosecuted. Inefficiency or worse, in high and low places under the Wilson administration, resulted in thousands of such jug-handled bargains. The cost plus system in itself was a standing invitation to the profiteer to go as far as he liked. Morally such waste, at a time when the life of the nation is at stake especially, is criminal, but it is not legally so. The functionaries who acted during the war as if their importance and usefulness was to be measured by the size of their expenditures, did not even leave the government a chance to get even in any with those who sand-bagged the Federal treasury under the terms of their contracts.—National Republican.

Notice to Contractors.

Sealed bids will be received by the Board of Trustees of the Village of Penn Yan, N. Y., until 8 p. m., Monday, June 26, 1922, for the following item:

INTERESTING ADDRESS.

One of the interesting addresses of the Yates Baptist Association, recently held in Dundee, was given by Lewis C. Williams, of Middlesex. The address follows:

I am glad to be in this gathering today. I consider it a great honor to be invited to say a word for the Sunday school. I do not claim to be a public speaker, just a "dirt" farmer. I think the Baptists are a great denomination—live wires in little Yates. Brother Wheatley, I believe, has the largest church membership and the largest Sunday school in Yates county. I was much interested in the recent report of his church work which appeared in the county papers. The two men in public life today on whom the very life of the nation depend are Baptists—President Harding and Secretary of State Hughes. I am not a stickler on denominations. I am a Methodist because that church dug me out and I was in honor bound to join that church. If I inherited any religion it is Congregationalism from a Godly grandmother. I think there is good in all denominations, Catholic as well as Protestant. Younger generations are not so rigid in their belief. A story is related of a Baptist and a Methodist church choir situated across the street from each other. One was singing "Will There Be Any Stars in My Crown?" The other choir sang, "No, Not One."

I have been requested to give a fifteen-minute talk on "How to Hold the Boys in Sunday School." I think it will take as much time as this to tell how to do it, and then some. I have been a teacher of boys' classes 25 years, numbering from 10 to 30, and now have the largest class in my experience. I have always taken an interest in boys and their sports; was a ball player myself, and had one son who came after me who was also a ball player. It has helped to keep me young in thought at any rate. That it is a laudable ambition to keep boys in Sunday school is evidenced by the fact that statistics tell us that you increase the probability of a boy or girl becoming a Christian four times or 400 per cent.; 80 per cent. of all persons who unite with the church come from the Sunday school; there are 1,645,901 in the United States in Sunday school who are not church members, between 12 and 24 years of age; 20,000,000 without religious instruction of any kind; 10,000,000 between 12 and 20 years, the period in which occur 70 per cent. of all crimes committed. The average age of prisoners in the United States is 19 years; average age in Sing Sing prison, 22 years.

Judge Fitch said recently in a talk to the King's Business classes of Canandaigua and Middlesex, that we had got to do something for the boys in this country is to exist. The home is the greatest factor in a boy's life. The most any teacher can do is to cooperate with the home. Someone has said a teacher must have the magnetism of Moses, the patience of Job, and the wisdom of Solomon to succeed. A teacher has got to practice what he preaches. You can fool the men, but you can't fool the boys. They can read you like an open book. Too many men forget that they were ever boys, and had to climb up "Fool's Hill" just as all the boys are doing today. They condemn boys for doing the same things they did when boys—always finding fault with the boys. A little lad was lost in New York City; they asked him his name and he said it was "Johnny Don't." I have known men that boys would run across the street to get rid of meeting. You can't make a postage stamp stick to a cake.

They Repented

"King Solomon and King David
In youth led the wayward lives.
Each had a few affinities
Besides their numerous wives.
But when old age came rolling on,
With all its aches and qualms,
King Solomon wrote the Proverbs,
And David wrote the Psalms."

The Good in "Wild" Young People.

Youth will have its fling, and some 2,000 years ago that wise old Roman, Cicero, remarked that "rashness attends youth as prudence does age," and this, we are told, is about as far and just as criticism can go against youth of today. No child, it is said, is really bad, and the "wild" young people of today, against whom so much stern criticisms has been directed in recent months, are all right at heart and no worse than their parents were a generation ago. It is no new topic, this talk of the folly of youth, says the St. Louis Globe Democrat, remarking that—

"The world has been wild and youth could not help but take on the aspects and the manner of wildness. It is a symptom, not a disease. And it is passing. Has it worked a moral degeneration of youth? It has not. The average youth of today, girl or boy, is sound. The flamboyances of the day are superficial. They have touched the surface of youth with garnish pigments, but they have not marred its soul. For somehow the soul of youth is commonly steered safely through the perils that beset it. Much that we think is corrupting somehow does not corrupt. The world is filled with men and women, staid and respectable, who were wild things in their youth, and by far the greater part of the wild youngters of today will be the respectable fathers and mothers of tomorrow. Most assuredly we need better homes and a number of other better influences, but after all there is a divinity that shapes our ends, rough hew them how we will, and youth in particular is never without its guardianship."

"Say hullo and how do you do,
Other folks are as good as you.
When you leave this house of clay,
Wandering in the faraway,
When you travel through the strange
Country t'other side the range,
Then the souls you've cheered will know
Who ye be, an' say hullo.

The Good Book says if you would have friends you must show yourself friendly. I never pass a boy or girl without speaking to them. To hold the class you must be on the job every Sunday—not semi-monthly, or monthly or when you feel like it, but every Sunday. A teacher must take pride in his class and hold it up as a great organization. Not have the feeling the young man did when he accompanied a young woman home. She said, "I wish you would not say anything about this." He said, "You need not be alarmed. I am as much ashamed of it as you are."

A teacher must preach the living gospel, that religion is to live by and not an insurance policy. Addition, not subtraction. We older people think much and talk of the future life; the vastness of the earth and the fullness thereof. They pray short because they do not have to pray for their enemies—they have none. You and I have. We think it takes a lot of grace to save and keep a boy. I believe it takes more grace to save a man when he begins to go down the shady side of life to keep him sweet and not a hindrance to the cause of Christ. Rev. Charles McKinley says we are responsible for God for every agency used, not only for the souls it wins and saves, but also for all whom we alienate and destroy. Athletics are good to hold the boys. We have a ball team and a ball ground, But with all the sports in the world without Jesus Christ we fail.

Music is good; most boys are good singers. Organization is good. I wish there were 500 members of the "King's Business" Sunday school classes in little Yates today. Someone has said organization or stagnation.

The preacher in charge can help a lot. How many sermons do we hear today that have any particular interest in them for the boys? Too much preaching about taking up crosses and of heavy burdens to bear. The Good Book says: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest; take my yoke upon you and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly at heart and I will be a rest to your souls." Fanny Crosby, who never saw the light of day, wrote the song, "Rest, Happy Rest," an everlasting rebuke to those Christians who are always complaining. We sing, "Where the Saviour lead I'll follow, thorny though the pathway be," forgetting the fact that the Good Books says, "There will be no more thorns if we accept Jesus Christ; where the thorns once grew shall come up the fir tree and where the briers grow shall come forth the myrtle tree."

We sing:—
"Jesus, I my cross have taken,
All to leave and follow thee:
Naked, poor, despised, forsaken"— forgetting that serving Christ never makes a man naked, poor, despised, forsaken, but on the contrary, this is one of the works of sin.

JOHN TABER ASPIRES TO TAKE GOULD'S PLACE.

In announcing himself as a candidate for Representative in Congress for this district, to succeed Hon. Norman C. Gould, who will not be a candidate for re-election, John Taber, of Auburn, said:

I am a candidate for the Republican nomination for Representative in Congress from the 36th Congressional District of this State, and I respectfully solicit the support of the Republicans of this District in the Primary next September.

JOHN TABER

This is one of the crucial periods in our country's history. Problems of reconstruction, reduction and restoration to normal of the governmental departments and governmental functions were perhaps never more acute than they are today. Likewise, business conditions have been normal and while they show a tendency to improve, there is yet a great deal to be done in that direction.

I stand for the well known principles of the Republican Party and will support such measures as tend to bring about the reduction of governmental expenditures and reduction of taxes.

The principle of reasonable protection of the American industries and farm products has been so long demonstrated to be absolutely necessary to the well-being of the country that a proper protective tariff should be maintained. The farming industry in this country is the real backbone of the nation and such legislation should be adopted and continued as will tend in every possible way to make the industry prosperous and life upon the farm more attractive. A joint committee of the Senate and House is now working on a constructive program along this line and very good results are expected.

Everything possible should be done to support President Harding by legislation and otherwise in his endeavor to improve the administration end of the government in so far as it relates to the care of our wounded and disabled soldiers and to provide proper hospitalization for them. This is due to the boys who gave up so much for the country, and I shall do everything in my power actively to support this proposition and to look after their interests.

I shall actively support the policies of the President, who has done so much already to place this country on a sound basis, both as regards its domestic affairs and its foreign relations.

Mr. Taber was born in Auburn May 5, 1880. Attended Auburn public schools and graduated from Auburn high school in 1898. Attended Yale University and graduated with degree of B. A. in 1902. Attended New York Law School for one year. Was admitted to the New York Bar in 1904. In 1904 when Roosevelt was elected President, was secretary to the Cayuga County Republican Committee. Elected Supervisor in the fall of 1905 and served one term in 1906 and 1907. Elected Special County Judge in 1910 and served for nine years, being twice re-elected in 1913 and 1916. Delegate to the Republican National Convention from this county in 1920. Has been chairman of the Republican County Committee for Cayuga County since the spring of 1920. In recent years he has been delegate to State Convention several times. Is president of the Auburn Chamber of Commerce. Is a Director of the Auburn Truste Company and actively connected with business affairs in the city and county.

Crippled for Life.

Suppose nobody cared? There is one organization in Yates county that does care and that is the Rotary Club of Penn Yan. One of the many organization is the care of crippled children and subsidiary to this are a number of other charitable enterprises such as work among boys and girls and the spreading of cheer and comfort especially at Christmas among the poor. The members of the Rotary Club are not bloated bond-holders, but simply ordinary business and professional men and consequently the funds for carrying out these works of service must come from without the organization. Accordingly the Rotary Club has arranged for a grand Field Day and Fourth of July Celebration to take place on the Fair Grounds. The attractions engaged for the day are so many and so diversified that the people who will swarm to the Fair Grounds wil well receive their money's worth.

The spirit of Independence Day will not be forgotten and the committee has booked as principal speaker of the day, former U. S. Commissioner of Immigration, Frederick A. Wallis, of New York City, who will deliver an address on "Americanism." For followers of the track there will be two horse races and an amateur buggy race. In the way of sports a series of running contests for boys and girls has been prepared, all carrying attractive prizes. In the afternoon the American Legion team of Penn Yan, which has been considerably strengthened lately, will be pitted against the Hammondsport team. This ball game alone will be worth the price of admission. Throughout the day the Penn Yan Band, augmented by several out-of-town members, will furnish music. All over the grounds a midway of side attractions will be provided which will guarantee a continous round of amusement throughout the day. All of the work incidental to the celebration will be carried out by the Rotary members themselves.

Of course you will care, too. By patronizing the Fourth of July celebration you will not only find healthy and wholesome entertainment, but you will be instrumental in carrying out the Rotary Club's program of benevolence among the handicapped and under-privileged children of Yates county.
