REUBEN ELSAAS' RESIDENCE.

BATTLE CREEK, MICHIGAN, May 8, 1893.

Dear Sir—I have had Rheumatism since I was a boy, and have been laid up with it about one-quarter of the time. I have bought Liniments and Plasters by the dozen, and have taken bottle after bottle of Sarsaparilla but I did not get any better. Those who have had it themselves know how I have suffered. After spending over $1,000 in medicine, treatments, etc., without any benefit, I tried

FORESTINE KIDNEY CURE.

I bought a big $1.00 bottle and it helped me very much. I have used 3 bottles and am cured. It has saved my life and I am grateful for it. Yours, &c.,

REUBEN ELSAAS.

Forestine Kidney and Malaria Cure acts on the system as follows:

1st. It moves the Bowels once a day. This is necessary for health.

2d. It regulates the Kidneys and Liver; you cannot get cured until this is first done.

3d. After these three organs of the human body are put into proper condition, then and not until then, will you be cured of Blood and Skin Diseases, such as Eczema, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Rheumatism and Neuralgia; also all forms of Kidney Diseases, Constipation, Piles, Catarrh, Female Weakness, Loss of Strength, Dyspepsia, Lung and Bronchial Troubles, etc.

It is not only a Spring Tonic, but a Tonic for every month in the year, and, therefore no other medicine is needed in the family.

To prove this, give it a trial. Price $1.00 per bottle (1 month's treatment); 6 bottles for $5.00. Sold by all druggists, with an offer of $100 for a better family medicine.

"MIKE" APPLES.

A Story of How the Blood Spotted Fruit of Connecticut Got Its Name.

The "Mike" apple is in the market. It is a product of eastern Connecticut, and its peculiar characteristic is a red speck, like a tinge of blood, somewhere in the pulp of each apple.

There is a history to this apple. It received its name from Micah Rood, who lived in old Norwich Town in 1650.

Everybody in eastern Connecticut has been told the story by Patrick Henry Woodward, of Hartford, in his "Tradition of Micah Rood." It is a quaint little story.

"Micah was a farmer," so the tale runs, "not far from the Susquetonscut River, tilling his fertile acres with all the zest of youthful ambition. Suddenly his habits changed. He grew idle, restless, intemperate. He lost interest in both work and worship. He neglected his cattle and shunned his neighbors.

"Some attributed the change to witchcraft; others hinted at insanity. So the winter wore away, spring returned and the orchard of Micah Rood burst into blossom. On one tree, it was then observed, the blossoms had turned from white to red.

"The superstitious neighbors wondered, especially as Rood seemed drawn to this tree by a cruel and a resistless fascination. August came and the red blossoms had developed into fruit. When the large yellow apples fell from the branches each one was found to contain the well-defined globule to be known thereafter as the 'drop of blood.'

"The conduct of the apple tree deepened the mystery of Micah's behavior. Conjecture ran riot, and soon it was remembered that the previous fall a peddler of foreign aspect had passed through the village and had spent the night at Micah Rood's. Popular opinion held that the latter had murdered him for his money and had buried his body under the apple tree.

"Search was made for him, but in vain; nor was any trace of his stock found among the unhappy Micah's possessions. The settlers were completely baffled. As usual, they fell back upon the supernatural, and the evidence was summed up in the manifestations of a troubled spirit and a blood-mottled apple.

"If a load rested upon the conscience of the unhappy farmer it never forced a confession from his lips. His farm gradually drifted to decay, and, too broken down to reclaim it, he assumed care of the meeting-house in 1717, receiving as compensation a peck of corn yearly from each family in the society. Ten years later the records of the church contained this item:

"'The inhabitants do now by their vote agree to allow each man that watches with Micah Rood two shillings per night; also to those who have attended Rood by day, three shillings per day.'

"In a little more than a year later this item appeared:

"'To Jacob Hyde, for digging Micah Rood's grave, £0 4s. 0d.'

"So the little tragedy ends as it began in mystery. Only while the blood spotted apple continues to grow the name of Micah Rood will be perpetuated."

Uses of the Bamboo.

It is hoped by the Department of Agriculture that the bamboo may yet be cultivated in this country as it is in China, where it supplies a large part of the wants of the people, being applied to more than 500 different purposes. In the Flowery Kingdom it takes the place of both iron and steel. The farmer builds his house and fences out of it, his farming utensils as well as his household furniture are manufactured from it, while the tender shoots furnish him with a most delicious vegetable for his table.

The roots are carved into fantastic images, shaped into divining blocks to guess the will of the gods, or cut into lantern handles and canes. The tapering culms are used for the props of houses, the framework of awnings, the ribs of sails and shafts of rakes, for fences and every sort of frames, coops and cages, and the handles and ribs of umbrellas and fans. The leaves are sewed into raincoats and thatches. The shavings and curled threads furnish materials for stuffing pillows, while parts supply the bed for sleeping, the chopsticks for eating, the pipe for smoking, the broom for sweeping, the mattress to lie upon, the chair to sit upon, the table to eat on, the food to eat, and the fuel to cook it with, etc., etc. In fact, its uses are almost without number.

An Ancient Buried City Found.

An underground city has been found in Turkestan, in caves on the bank of Amon Dairi, in the chain of rocky hills. It has been found from the gold and silver coins unearthed that it existed 2,000 years before the birth of Christ. All kinds of earthen and iron vessels are found there, and ornaments, the inscriptions showing a high degree of civilization. The city is laid out in streets and squares, and some of the houses are several stories in height, chiseled out of the solid rock.—Home and Country.
