Thank you: Letter from the Editor

Hello and welcome back to another semester! As I'm sure you've noticed, it's very wintry here right now. Instagram told me that this is the prettiest place even though several feet of snow and if I was warm enough to unhuddle from my hats, scarves, and jackets and raise my face to be stung by icy flurries, I'm sure I would agree.

This is my last semester here in Geneva, and I don't know what to think about that. If you had asked me any other time, I would have firmly told you that I never wanted to leave and was, in fact, never leaving and I would be a student forever. But then I started to apply for jobs and magically I felt like a real adult. While I want to stay here beside the lake with my friends and my safe little world, I also feel ready to start making my own decisions. Mainly I'm excited to see what having my own apartment feels like. I just have to remind myself that no matter which apartment I get, it won't come with an endless supply of hot free food (and I'm using 'free' in a way my parents would totally disagree with) and friends the way sagas does.

The funniest thing is how upset my priorities have become. I'm not stressing because I have 100 days of school left and no job; I'm stressed because I haven't even come close to finishing my bucket list. I'm not stressed about the three essays due tomorrow, I'm stressed because it's snowing outside and I forgot my gloves. And I'm supposed to be able to make it on my own.

Danny, everyone's favorite managing editor, told me I'm not allowed to talk about jobs anymore. So I've got nothing left to say. Have a lovely semester, and please write for us. Even if you think it will be bad, we can handle it.

Love from us at the Herald.
