Old keepsakes, dedication mark church's 100th year

ARMONK — Armonk United Methodist Church, the century-old building at the intersection of Main Street and Bedford Road here, will be rededicated Sunday for the start of its second hundred years.

The church was first dedicated June 27, 1872.

Bishop Lloyd C. Wick, resident bishop for the New York area of the United Methodist Church will conduct the rededication ceremony at 10 a.m.

Church keepsakes will be shared that day. Members and friends have searched their homes for old papers, pictures and items of interest for an exhibit of memorabilia at the anniversary celebration. Several items have already been collected: a tintype calendar with a picture of the Rev. Cornford, pastor of the church in 1898, a piece of the original oak leaf which capped the church steeple in its early years, and a Sunday School record book dated March 1, 1891. Also on display will be the original wooden model of the church, designed by Isabella Waterbury, and a membership certificate dating back to 1923, a contribution by Mrs. Sarah Johnson, a member to this day.

For almost 86 years the Methodist Society, organized in 1872, conducted worship services in a church standing in the old Methodist cemetery at Cox Avenue and School Street. Then, in 1870, the Society decided a new church was needed. A year later the trustees purchased the land on which the church now stands. The building committee engaged Edward Dauchey of Mt. Kisco as its contractor.

When came the effort of the congregation to raise the money needed to complete the new church, according to North Castle Town Historian Richard Lander. It was to cost $11,000, a sizable sum in those days. The money began coming in. The largest recorded donation was $150 and the smallest single gift was $1, which probably meant a considerable sacrifice on the donor's part, said Mr. Lander.

When the new church opened its doors officially to a waiting congregation and friends, a second stone was laid in the foundation of the belfry tower. It bears the simple inscription "Dedicated June 27, 1872."

Details of the first worship service and those participating are scanty. The Westchester News, published in White Plains, covered the event with this brief account, "ARMONK — The New Methodist Episcopal Church built by Edward Dauchey of Mt. Kisco was dedicated on Thursday last. The edifice forms a striking contrast to the old shell on the hill, in which the Methodists have worshipped since the flood. The Rev. DeLos Lull was among the speaker and the singing was furnished by the New Castle Church."

North Castle library loans

ARMONK — Vacation loans are now in effect at North Castle Library and books may be kept until September 9.

This schedule covers all books except the new ones and those on reading lists compiled by the schools for suggested summer reading for young people.

BEDFORD — Turning back the clock almost a century and a half, Westchester's legislators will meet Monday in the 1787 Bedford court house where their predecessors used to hold sessions every other year.

The commemorative afternoon meeting of the county board of legislators recalls the era when both Bedford and White Plains were county seats and the old board of supervisors and the county courts met in both towns. The last supervisors' meeting in Bedford was in 1829 and the last county court session in 1870.

The 1972 Bedford meeting of the governing body that supplanted the county board of supervisors two years ago will take place in the same landmark edifice as these earlier sessions. The Bedford courthouse is the oldest Westchester County government building extant and one of only three 18th Century courthouses in New York State. It was reopened in 1970 as a historical museum after a five-year restoration by the Bedford Historical Society, the Town of Bedford, and the New York State Historical Trust.

Herman S. Geist, chairman of the Board of Legislators, will preside at the meeting. Erwin H. Uellendahl, Bedford's supervisor, and Halsted Park Jr., president of Bedford Historical Society, will welcome the board.

Among those who have been invited to attend the meeting are the district's representatives in Congress and the Legislature, supervisors from northern Westchester, and directors of the historical society. Admission will be by invitation only, since the benches in the old court room seat only 42 persons.

During the Revolution, after the Battle of White Plains, the Westchester supervisors met in Bedford and elsewhere in the northern part of the county. After the war, the Legislature ordered courthouses built in both Bedford and White Plains.

Bedford was then the more populous of the two towns. But the coming of the railroad in the 1840s built up southern Westchester, putting White Plains nearer the population center, and also improved transportation so that two county seats were no longer needed. Bedford lost its "half-shire" status in 1870. A few years later ownership of its courthouse was transferred to the town.

Our motto is: "We build or repair to suit your needs from a doorknob to a new room."
