EMIGRATION.

Those who desire to procure Certi- ficates for Passage, for their friends or Drafts on the Royal or National Banks of Ireland, National Bank o Scotland, and the Bank of Messrs Glynn, Halifax Mills & Co, London. and Guion & Co., Liverpool will do well to remember that the

OLD EMIGRATION AND FOREIGN EXCHANGE OFFICE,
No. 5 Sidway Block, Commercial Street,
BUFFALO,

Is the Oldest and Best, having been established for TEN years during which time several thousands of dollars have passed in passage orders and drafts, safe- ly through the hands of the undersigned, and been duly forwarded to the destination required, and duly paid on presentation to the Irish Bank, and have not to be sent to Liverpool to be paid, as others are.

To those who desire to have their friends brough to this country from any part of Europe, the sub- scriber would say, that he is the authorized Agent of that popular and unerring Line of Packet Ships called of Liverpool, a few of whose ships it will be suffi ient to name,

The Washington,	The Robert Kelly,
The Guy Mannering,	The Niagara.
The D. W. Clinton,	The Marmion,
The J. A. Westervelt,	The Universe,
The Enterprise,	The Princeton,
The Ticonderoga,	The Shannon.

These magnificent ships are from 1,000 to 2,000 tons burthen, and fitted up with every comfort, com- manded by experienced Captains, whose uniform kindness is londly spoken of.

☞ Let it be distinctly understood, that the ships of the Black Star Line sail from Liverpool without fail, on their appointed days—1st, 6th, 11th, 16th, 21st and 26th of each month.

There is no delay caused to the emigrant, as the Passage Certificate is plainly for their Convenience alone.

DRAFTS are constantly for sale on the following Banks:

The Royal Bank of Ireland and National Bank of Ireland.
National Bank of Scotland.
Banks of Messrs. Glynn, Halifax, Mills & Co. London, and Guion & Co., Liverpool.

THE ONLY TRUE PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

JUST PUBLISHED,
T. B. WELCH'S MAGNIFICENT PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.
Engraved (by permission) from Stuart's only origi- nal portrait, in the Atheneum, Boston.

This superb picture, Engraved under the su- perintendence of THOMAS SULLY, Esq., the eminent and highly gifted artist, is the only cor- rect likeness of Washington ever published It has been characterized as the greatest work of art ever produced in this country. As to its fi delity, we refer to the letters of the adopted son of Washington, GEORGE WASHINGTON PARK CUSTIS, who says, "It is a faithful re- presentation of the celebrated original," and to CHIEF JUSTICE TANEY of the Supreme Court of the United States, who says. "As a work of art its excellence and beauty must strike every one who sees it: and it is no less happy in its likeness to the Father of his country. It was my good fortune to have seen him in the days of my boyhood, and his whole appearance is yet strongly impressed on my memory. The por- trait you have issued appears to me to be an EX- ACT LIKENESS, representing perfectly the expres- sion as well as the form and features of the face." And says SENATOR CASS, it is a life-like re- presentation of the great original. PRESI- DENT FILLMORE says, "The work appears to me to have been admirably executed and emi- nently worthy of the patronage of the public" Says MARCHANT the eminent portrait paint- er, and the pupil of Stuart, "your print to my mind is more remarkable than any other I have seen, for presenting the WHOLE individuality of the original portrait, together with the noble and dignified repose of air and manner, which all who ever saw him considered a marked charac- teristic of the illustrious man it commemorates."

For the great merits of this picture we would refer every lover of Washington to the Portrait itself, to be seen at the office of this paper, and to the letters of the following Artists, States- men, Jurists and Scholars accompanying it

The Evening Post.

From the American Union.

Recollections of Willow-way.

BY MISS CHARLOTTE LESLIE.

CONCLUSION.

My aunt had been in delicate health for some years, and two years after Ellen Grey had been laid in the churchyard I followed my only relation there, feeling, when I en- tered the lonely house again, that now there was no one to care much for me.

The property, which consisted only of a house and fine garden, was mine, but my aunt had lived upon a life annuity, which, of course, ceased at her death.

Many offers of assistance came, but I pre- fered independence, and in a few weeks open- ed a day school, still keeping possession of the old house and the old housekeeper.

Mary urged my making her a visit, if nothing more, and I had been talking of it long, but some how or other, putting it off from time to time, when one day, Fred burst into my schoolroom, and told me to send the the children home, for an indefinite vacation, and pack up my clothes, for he was to start for Washington the next day, and I must go to New York, and make that visit.

"But Frederick."

"There are no but's in the case," said he; 'be ready when the stage starts to-morrow."

I had nothing to do, but go; and after a pleasant journey, we arrived at New York, Fred leaving me at Mr. Simpson's door, and going off without calling.

I received a warm welcome, and was at home at once. with Mary, whom I found the same gentle lovely being she had always been, though wonderfully improved in mind and manners.

She was living in the midst of wealth, and flattery, but neither prosperity nor adversity could spoil her.

I was charmed, and so was Fred, when he called on his return. I read it in his eyes, though his tongue said nothing. Strangely enough, business called him to New York, before a month had elapsed, and then he de- cided to stay and hear a fine course of lec- tures, calling every morning, (to see me, of course,) and contriving to be our escort on most occasions.

He was desperately in love, and desperate- ly jealous, too, of a very handsome man, who came often to the house, and seemed to be in great favor with Mary.

I wouldn't tell him that the person in question was engaged to a friend of Mary's, that the family were displeased all round, the lady very hard to please, and that Mary was called in on all occasions to make matters straight, for it would not hurt him to be jeal- ous a little I thought.

But I was almost sorry that I had not, when one night at a concert, Mary had conferred aside with Mr. Whitnell, and promised to drive out early with him the next morning.

Old Mr. Simpson made the matter worse by turning with a smile, and very wise look, to us, and making some remarks about folks in love.

Fred said nothing for the rest of the even- ing—left us at the carriage door, and called next morning, when Mary and I were sitting in two rocking-chairs before the parlor fire, talking over our various plans and arrange- ments, looking as though he hadn't slept for a fortnight.

I tried to carry on a conversation, but they both seemed ill at ease, and at last Fred rose abruptly, asking me if I had any commands for home, as he started for there in a few hours.

"Why!" exclaimed I, "yesterday you meant to stay with us some time, and you have not heard all the lectures yet; what new notion has taken possession of you?"

He glanced at Mary, who was playing with the tassel of her apron, and looking on the floor, and muttered something about unfore- seen circumstances.

She rose and came forward with a height- ened color, but she looked him full in the face.

"And is there anything in those circum- stances, that forbids your friends knowing them?"

There was no resisting the truth in her eyes. He took her hand.

"It is because; Mary, I cannot stay to see the only woman I ever loved possessed by another."

"You may stay then, Fred," said she soft- ly; laying her other hand on his arm "for no other will ever possess her.

I slipped out, and told the servants that Miss Simpson was not at home that morning and undertook to chat with her uncle, when he came home to dinner.

We waited till the old man was tired, and then he burst into the room, getting up quite a scene with the lovers, kissing, blessing and crying, and finally compelling Fred to stay for dinner.

They made all sorts of ludicrous mistakes at table, and Fred ended by treading on my dress, to the great detriment of the gathers, and begging Mr. Simpson's pardon for it.

We had a nice wedding in due time, and Fred took his wife home.

It is not necessary for me to tell how well they both played their parts, or how birth and death, joy and sorrow, successively en- tered their house. All that, you can imag- ine.

Suffice it to say, that they thought me a necessary fixture in their house, that this flickering light dances on the walls of the corner chamber, which I have occupied for years, and that that little golden head on the pillow, belongs to their youngest darling, aunt Anne's namesake, and special pet.

There! the fire is out. Good night, and pleasant dreams to you, dear reader.
