The defeat of Wagram has excited the greatest irritation and disorder among the troops within the French army. The Emperor Napoleon himself is said to have been in great irritation when he learned of the disaster, and declared that the army was no longer under his control. He at once set out for the scene of the battle, accompanied by his ministers and generals.

The French army was completely routed, and Field-Marshal Lord Wellington made himself master of the French camp and headquarters. The Emperor Napoleon was captured and taken prisoner, and the French army was obliged to leave the field of battle and retire to the interior of France.

The news of the defeat of Wagram was received with the greatest joy and triumph by the British nation, and the whole country was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy. The news was received at the British camp at Trafalgar, and the whole army was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy.

The victory of Lord Wellington at Wagram was hailed as a great triumph for the British nation, and the whole country was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy. The news was received at the British camp at Trafalgar, and the whole army was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy.

The victory of Lord Wellington at Wagram was hailed as a great triumph for the British nation, and the whole country was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy. The news was received at the British camp at Trafalgar, and the whole army was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy.

The victory of Lord Wellington at Wagram was hailed as a great triumph for the British nation, and the whole country was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy. The news was received at the British camp at Trafalgar, and the whole army was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy.

The victory of Lord Wellington at Wagram was hailed as a great triumph for the British nation, and the whole country was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy. The news was received at the British camp at Trafalgar, and the whole army was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy.

The victory of Lord Wellington at Wagram was hailed as a great triumph for the British nation, and the whole country was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy. The news was received at the British camp at Trafalgar, and the whole army was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy.

The victory of Lord Wellington at Wagram was hailed as a great triumph for the British nation, and the whole country was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy. The news was received at the British camp at Trafalgar, and the whole army was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy.

The victory of Lord Wellington at Wagram was hailed as a great triumph for the British nation, and the whole country was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy. The news was received at the British camp at Trafalgar, and the whole army was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy.

The victory of Lord Wellington at Wagram was hailed as a great triumph for the British nation, and the whole country was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy. The news was received at the British camp at Trafalgar, and the whole army was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy.

The victory of Lord Wellington at Wagram was hailed as a great triumph for the British nation, and the whole country was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy. The news was received at the British camp at Trafalgar, and the whole army was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy.

The victory of Lord Wellington at Wagram was hailed as a great triumph for the British nation, and the whole country was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy. The news was received at the British camp at Trafalgar, and the whole army was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy.

The victory of Lord Wellington at Wagram was hailed as a great triumph for the British nation, and the whole country was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy. The news was received at the British camp at Trafalgar, and the whole army was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy.

The victory of Lord Wellington at Wagram was hailed as a great triumph for the British nation, and the whole country was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy. The news was received at the British camp at Trafalgar, and the whole army was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy.

The victory of Lord Wellington at Wagram was hailed as a great triumph for the British nation, and the whole country was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy. The news was received at the British camp at Trafalgar, and the whole army was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy.

The victory of Lord Wellington at Wagram was hailed as a great triumph for the British nation, and the whole country was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy. The news was received at the British camp at Trafalgar, and the whole army was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy.

The victory of Lord Wellington at Wagram was hailed as a great triumph for the British nation, and the whole country was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy. The news was received at the British camp at Trafalgar, and the whole army was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy.

The victory of Lord Wellington at Wagram was hailed as a great triumph for the British nation, and the whole country was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy. The news was received at the British camp at Trafalgar, and the whole army was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy.

The victory of Lord Wellington at Wagram was hailed as a great triumph for the British nation, and the whole country was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy. The news was received at the British camp at Trafalgar, and the whole army was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy.

The victory of Lord Wellington at Wagram was hailed as a great triumph for the British nation, and the whole country was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy. The news was received at the British camp at Trafalgar, and the whole army was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy.

The victory of Lord Wellington at Wagram was hailed as a great triumph for the British nation, and the whole country was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy. The news was received at the British camp at Trafalgar, and the whole army was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy.

The victory of Lord Wellington at Wagram was hailed as a great triumph for the British nation, and the whole country was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy. The news was received at the British camp at Trafalgar, and the whole army was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy.

The victory of Lord Wellington at Wagram was hailed as a great triumph for the British nation, and the whole country was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy. The news was received at the British camp at Trafalgar, and the whole army was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy.

The victory of Lord Wellington at Wagram was hailed as a great triumph for the British nation, and the whole country was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy. The news was received at the British camp at Trafalgar, and the whole army was thrown into a state of wild excitement and joy.