LOOK AT THIS!

Still keeps Knitting at his Old Stand!!

HENRY JOHNSON, would inform his friends and the public generally, that he continues the WEAVING business, in all its branches, at his Stand in the town of Benton, near Bellona village. He flatters himself, after long experience in the above business, that he will not be outdone by any establishment in the state.—His CARPETS and COVERLETS will be wove in figures, the same as the imported Scotch Carpeting, and far superior in point of quality. Customers can have their names wove in the Coverlets, in large capital letters: the name will be neat, the figure beautiful, and the whole surrounded with a rich spread-eagle Border.

Rags wove whole, as round as a horn.
In perfect readiness to receive the Corn

All orders punctually attended to.

N. B. Carpet Yarn will be COLORED in the neatest manner, and on reasonable terms.

RIMMER'S SPEECH,

At the Manchester Temperance Society's Tea Party.

We are much indebted to the politeness of the editors of the Old Countryman for a scrap of the Manchester (Eng.) Times of June 16, containing an account of a meeting of upwards of 400 members of the Manchester Society in the Exchange Buildings, where they partook of a beverage of TEA instead of alcoholic drinks. The several speeches are given, but we pass them all for the following, which will be found highly instructive, as well as graphic and amusing. By the way, we could wish that Temperance meetings in this country, were of tenor held on the plain republican plan, so common in Old England! in which the common laborer vies with the statesman, the jurist, the physician, and the prelate, in illustrating the benefits of the TEMPERANCE REFORMATION.

ROBERT RIMMER, a journeyman dyer in Salford, then addressed the company to the following effect: Mr. Cheerman, and ladies and gentlemen: I have been as drunken a fellow as was ever known in Manchester or Salford. Before I knew of the temperance societies, I was out of employment—I could get no work, and was like a poor lost sheep, wandering about the streets, this day twelve-months; and had it not been for the temperance societies I should have been like a vagabond in the streets yet. I was out of employment, I said, and not a master in our trade in the town would give me work. But there was a master silk dyer, who had started in the country, and I thought it would be a place where I was not known. I went and asked the master for a situation. He said, "Do you know any of our men?" I said, "Yes," and I told him the names of some of his men; but then I began to be rather frightened, for fear I should be found out. Then he went to inquire into my character, and when he had gone I thought to myself, my job's done. (Laughter.) He soon came back and said, "We don't want any." I then went to the man who had gone with me there, and said, "I may as well be a thief as a drunkard—I have found that out." This man said he had been to a temperance meeting in Campfield, and had heard some very good discourse from a gentleman from Eccles. I said, "What's the meaning of these temperance meetings?" and he told me that they were meetings of men who had refrained from ardent spirits. I said to him, "When is there another meeting?" and he said he could not tell me. But as we were going up to Salford he saw a bill on the wall, and he read it for me, for I could not read myself. But now I can read a bit. (Applause.) The bill said the meeting was in Broughton road on Tuesday next. I went to it and liked it very well. I attended the next meeting in Gravel-lane, and I liked that better; the next meeting was in Broom-street and I liked that better still. The next meeting was in Crnal-street, Oldfield road, on the 1st of August last, and there I was convinced that it was a good thing, and prayed to God to keep me to it. (Cheers.) I thank God I did do so. An old master of mine was the Cheerman that neet, and he said to me, "Rimmer, if thou had taken my advice three years ago, thou would now have been worth one hundred pounds; and I have since found his words were true. Now I can draw my wages comfortably, and when I get the money I put it in wife's lap, because I know that she will lay it out to the best advantage. (Applause.) For twenty-six or twenty-seven years before I joined the temperance society, she was plagued with a drunken husband, and she has not had one moment's comfort only since I joined. Before I joined, I had neither tables nor cheers, nor any pots in the house; but now I have plenty of cheers and tables and a good fat pig in the cote. (Laughter and applause.) I have left off drinking altogether, except a gill of beer at my meals, which I send for to the Tom and Jerry shops. Those Tom and Jerry shops, Sir, are a big nuisance; and reel-legged men from them on Sabbath mornings, and they are worse places, Sir, you may depend, than the gin shops. (Laughter.) I think Gail that Temperance Societies were raised in Manchester. Yesterday twelve month—no, Whissuntide is nearer this year, I think—but last Whissun-Sunday but one I was on Kersal Moor, drunk, without shoes, coat, or hat. Yesterday me and my wife went arm in arm to Christ Church, and it was a blessed day to me. Who will say there is no benefit in Temperance Societies? I thank God I have joined. I have now a good coat on my back, and I have the honor to say it is paid for.—(Cheers and laughter.) Every thing I have in the house is paid for, and I am never without a shilling in my pocket. (Renewed cheering.) My Missus says and declares she never knew comfort in the house until I joined the Temperance Society, and she tells the neighbors she is sure she has got a new husband. (Laughter.) I pressed on her to come to the tea party, for I said I shan't be comfortable there without thee; but she goes out, you see, a washing for gentlemen, and she said she could not come, but she said I shall be quite comfortable when thou'rt out, for I shall know where thou art, and that thou wilt come home sober. (Cheers.) I will say this of her, there is no better wife in the land. (Cheers and laughter.) I have served in the army years, but I would not take £10,000 to part from the Temperance regiment. When my wife used to travel on the baggage-cart, the other women would say, "Come, Mrs. Rimmer, and take a glass of gin." And my wife would never take it, but she said it always starved her; and it does starve people, Sir, you may depend on it. (Loud laughter.) I think that the happiest neet of my life that I signed the pledge in Oldfield Road. I lost one of my lads about a month ago—he was drowned at Broughton Bridge. When I was a drunkard, he used to get off to bed before I got home, for fear of me, but when I became a sober man he never would go to bed until his father came home, he loved me so. (Hear, hear, and cheers.) I have another son, about 18 years of age; and a man that works said to me one day: "What benefit has thou, Rimmer, in the Temperance Society?" I said to him, "Ask our Charley what benefit there is." He said, "Well, Charley, is there any benefit in these Temperance Societies?" And Charley said, "Aye, I get more bred and cheese now."—(Laughter.) I think to myself very often, what can I do to make my wife amends for all my ill usage to her. She has had the sours, and now she shall have the sweets. If God Almighty lets me live, I will make her amends for the life I have led her for twenty-seven years. I hope in a few weeks to keep her out of the washing tub—she has given notice to two or three places. (Cheers.) She now often says, "I never passed such a year since I was tied to thee." I read now in the spelling book, and when she has done her work she gives me a lesson. I have found it easier to engage a downright drinker than a moderate one. I am raising recruits. I have formed a section—and soon hope to get a division and even a company. There's many folks have said that Rimmer often gets drunk now, and that they have seen me come rolling out of Jerry's shop; but I dont mind them, for they think they are doing Temperance Societies harm; but what they say is doing them good." [The speaker after a few more remarks retired from the platform amidst thunders of applause.

The company was afterwards addressed by other individuals; and the proceedings closed about ten o'clock, a vote of thanks having passed to Rimmer, for his beautiful graphic speech, and to Doct. Hull, for his kindness and courtesy in the chair.]

Cape de Verd Sufferers.—We are happy to state that the committee for the relief of the sufferers at the Cape de Verd Islands, have received between $24,000 and $25,000, chiefly from collections in the churches in this city and Brooklyn. This amount will be considerably increased. The brig Orion, with 500 barrels, will sail in a day or two, and another vessel will be despatched soon. The whole amount subscribed for this object, here and elsewhere, will not be less than $20,000 or $25,000; sufficient to purchase four or five thousand barrels of flour and meal. This most seasonable relief to a suffering population, four thousand miles distant, we cannot but regard as honorable to the American liberality. It affords a practical contradiction to one of the standing reproaches of English Trollopes, Fauxes, &c.—Jour. of Com.
