UNITED STATES INSURANCE COMPANY, of the City of New York,
For FIRE and MARINE Insurance.
CAPITAL $1,000,000. SHARES $100 each.
THE Capital of the above Company having all been subscribed, and the first instalment of 10 per cent paid in and secured according to law, the Company will soon be prepared to enter into business. The Commissioners are desirous that the stock should be more generally distributed in smaller amounts for permanent investment, according to the original plan and intentions of the Institution; and for this purpose are prepared to assign from original subscriptions, from one, to ten or twenty shares to parties wishing to invest in the stock of this Company.
The terms of investment are unusually liberal, more so it is believed, than those of any Insurance Company in the United States; and when this is considered in connection with the fact that most of our FIRE Insurance Companies have paid large dividends, and the MARINE Insurance Companies enormous dividends for several years past, the Stockholders may reasonably anticipate a ready and handsome income from their Investments in this Company.
The conditions of investment and payment, either in cash, Bank or City Stock, or in Real Estate, may be obtained on application to I. H. HERBERT, City Surveyor.

TO THE PUBLIC.—The subscriber takes the liberty of presenting to the public the following letter from a highly respectable gentleman of this city in reference to the effects of the celebrated medicine, the Balsam of Moscatello—in cases of Cholera Morbus, Diarrhœa, &c. The undersigned takes this opportunity of stating that he has in his possession hundreds of similarly gratifying testimonials from the most respectable individuals of this and other cities; sufficient to assure the most sceptical and unbelieving that as a remedy for bowel complaints in adults and for the summer complaint of children, this balsam is the most safe, certain and valuable in the world.
J. WHEELER, Oculist,
33 Greenwich street, near the Battery.
(Copy.)
New York, August 17, 1841.
Dear Sir—While suffering a few days since from a violent attack of the Cholera Morbus, I was recommended by a friend to make a trial of your Balsam of Moscatello, (of the celebrity of which I had not before heard,) and I was as much gratified as astonished to find that the first wine glass full I took greatly meliorated my pains, and that, on taking a second dose, I got completely well. With the bottle which I had from you, I received a pamphlet, containing the names of several gentlemen well known in the city, highly recommending your medicine, and I don't know that I can render a better service to the public than by adding my name to the list. If you think proper to use it for such a purpose, you are quite at liberty to do so.
Yours, &c. LOUIS MARK,
153 Water st, cor. Maiden lane.
Dr. Wheeler, 33 Greenwich st.
The Balsam of Moscatello is for sale at Dr. Wheeler's office, No. 33 Greenwich street, near the Battery, and at Mr. John Lowe's, 89 Fulton st, Brooklyn, who is appointed sole Agent for that city. o26

BAILEY'S SARATOGA POWDERS, FOR MAKING CONGRESS, SPRING, OR SARATOGA WATERS.—These Powders form an effervescing aperient draught, possessing all the medical virtues of the Congress Springs at Saratoga.
They have been found extremely useful in most complaints of the stomach, particularly in those where all other aperient medicines cannot be retained. They act as an aperient or alterative, and at the same time give tone and strength to the stomach, and increase the digestive powers. They are most valuable in dyspepsia and billious diseases, and are conducive to health by acting as a tonic and imparting strength to the constitution. As an alterative, the proper time for taking them is before breakfast—but they may be taken any time with advantage, in cases of sick or nervous headache, heartburn, nausea, or acidity of stomach. One dose of the Powder is equal to a small bottle, and two doses equal to a large bottle of Saratoga Water; where a brisk purge is wanted, half an ounce of Epsom salts may be mixed with the contents of the blue paper.
These Powders are much superior to the Seidlitz, being equally aperient, and at the same time possessing valuable tonic and chalybeate qualities.
Prepared and sold by William Bailey, Chemist, Apothecaries' Hall, corner of Sands and Fulton streets. o26

ERASMUS HALL, FLATBUSH, (L. I.) four and a half miles from New York.—The Trustees of Erasmus Hall are happy to announce to the public, that they have engaged James Ferguson, A. M. late Rector of the Grammar School of Rutgers College, as Principal of their Academy. Mr. F. is a gentleman of high literary and scientific attainments, an able instructor, and an efficient disciplinarian. From his superior qualifications for teaching, his past experience, and the patronage heretofore extended to to him, the Trustees anticipated the happiest results from his connection with the institution. The known ability of the Principal, the contiguity of Flatbush to the cities of New York and Brooklyn, its healthfulness and character for morality, the extensive Library and apparatus connected with the institution, and the moderate rates of instruction, present advantages to parents for the education of their children, which may safely compare with any other Academy in the State. Grateful for the liberal patronage heretofore shown to their Academy, the Trustees would respectfully solicit a continuance of the same.
The winter season will commence on the 1st of November next. The terms, which are reasonable, can be ascertained at the Academy, or on application to JOHN A LOTT, No. 3 Front street, Brooklyn.
By order of the Trustees:
JEREMIAH LOTT, President.
Flatbush, Oct. 9th, 1841. o26

TEMPERANCE DRINK.—SARSAPARILLA MEAD SYRUP.—The public are respectfully assured, that in the above preparation, they will find an article meeting all their expectations. It immediately forms an effervesing drink, the most delicious and healthy. If it is used in the hot seasons, merely as a common drink, it will do more good than any of the most highly medicated spring waters. No article is perhaps so much sought for in the hot seasons as pleasant drinks, the great object therefore in the manufacture of such articles as produce those drinks, should be not only to have it grateful to the taste, but condusive to health, and the proprietor is convinced that all of the above objects have been accomplished in his compound Sarsaparilla Mead Syrup, which is really well worthy the attention of the public. The proprietor would offer it as a Temperance drink, and while a reform so laudable in itself as that of Temperance is so rapidly progressing in this community, would it not be well, after adopting a resolution redundant with so much praise, as that of henceforth and forever abstaining from the use of all ardent spirits, to treat themselves with a bottle of the health restoring Sarsaparilla Mead Syrup, manufactured only by the subscriber. None genuine unless his name is attached to each bottle, as he is the only inventor.
For sale wholesale and retail, by
WM. BAILEY, Apothecaries' Hall, o26 corner Sands and Fulton streets.

SHERMAN'S ORRIS TOOTH PASTE.—The best dentrifrice in the world, warranted not to injure the teeth, but to cleanse and beautify them, harden the gums, sweeten the breath, and keep the teeth from aching. Dr. Chilton, one of the ablest chemists in America, uses it as the best article ever offered to the public.
Dr. R. C. Castle, 297 Broadway, a dentist of the most extensive practice, and of the highest reputation, recommends it as all that could be desired as a pleasant and efficacious dentrifrice.
Dr. Elliot, the distinguished oculist, corner of Broadway and Warren street, has used it for two years, and considers it the best article known.
Prof. Ward, 113 Chambers street, uses no other article for his teeth.
Daniel M. Fyre, Esq., No. 10 First Avenue, never uses any other dentritrce, and recommends it as a strictly superior article.
Col. J. L. Haints, 114 Maiden Lane, recommends it as an excellent article—none equal to it.
Wholesale and retail, 106 Nassau street, New York Agents, 58 and 139 Fulton street, Brooklyn. o2.6

EYE WATER, prepared by Mrs. Hayes, 139 Fulton street.—A cure for sore and inflamed eyes never known to fail, even in cases that baffled the skill of the most eminent oculists in New York. One person was for eleven years suffering, and every means was used, but to no purpose; when he commenced using Mrs. Hayes's eye water he was nearly blind—it cured him in less than two months. For proof of this case, Mrs. H. would refer to Mr. Faxon, 171 Fulton street. Many others of long standing have been cured in three or four days—some in a shorter time—Further reference—E. Flower, 13 Gornell, Mrs. Vanderveer, Mrs. Ringwood, Mr. S. Cole, Mr. Flinn, milkman. Albert G. Benson, Esq., 113 Henry street, had his son cured by 1 bottle, after having been under care of the eminent Dr. D., of New York, for some months. Many more references and testimonials can be seen at the proprietor's. Price of the Eye Water, 25 cents per bottle. o26

REFORM MEETINGS.
MEETINGS to further the cause of Total Abstinence from all Intoxicating Drinks, will take place every Sunday night at the Apprentices' Library, City Buildings, corner of Henry and Cranberry streets, at half past 7 o'clock, with the view of forming a Society on the true Washingtonian plan, under the following pledge:
We, whose names are annexed, desirous of forming a Society for our mutual benefit and to guard against a pernicious practice which is injurious to our health, standing, and families, do pledge ourselves as gentlemen that we will not drink any spirituous or malt liquors, wine or cider.
☞ All are invited to attend.
☞ Especially are those appealed to who have the least wish or desire to discontinue a practice which reason and judgment alike convince us to be injurious to our health, standing and character in society.

A SEMINARY FOR YOUNG LADIES, AT SOUTH BROOKLYN.—The Rev'd WARD STAFFORD proposes to open on Wednesday, the 10th of November next, a Select Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies, at Blake's Buildings, Court street, South Brooklyn.
The Principal will be assisted by well-qualified and experienced Teachers in the respective Departments. It will be their constant aim to furnish to Young Ladies the best advantages for acquiring a thorough knowledge of all the useful and ornamental branches of an accomplished female education. The Boarding Department will be strictly a family school; a limited number only of young ladies being admitted, whose health, manners and education, intellectual and religious, will receive the constant attention of the Principal, and the Ladies associated with him.
The house is spacious and well adapted to the purpose. The location is singularly healthy and pleasant, commanding an extensive prospect, enjoying all the advantages of a retired country village, yet within a short distance of the South Ferry, and convenient to the churches of the respective religious denominations.

SHERMAN'S COUGH LOZENGES.—The Greatest Discovery Ever Made.—Sherman's Cough Lozenges will cure common coughs or colds in one or two days, afford immediate relief in the whooping cough, asthma, difficult breathing and tightness of the chest, and cure consumption sooner than any other medicine.
Read what they have done—I have used Sherman's Cough Lozenges in several hundred cases and never found any thing equal them; they give immediate relief, and have cured the most troublesome coughs in one day. I can confidently recommend them as the best medicine in use.
H. Y. ROGERS, M. D.
I was cured of the Consumption by three boxes of Sherman's Cough Lozenges, after having suffered for three years, and trying several doctors and every thing I heard recommended. I owe my life to them through the blessing of God.
L. L. WILLIAMS.
Mr. R. D. Kemp, of Newburg, after three years of suffering from a severe cough, night sweats, pain in the side and all the symptoms of a confirmed consumption, and after having tried in vain all the medicines he heard of, at last was told of Sherman's Cough Lozenges and by the blessing of God, three boxes entirely cured him. He recommends them to all.

GOETHE'S ADVENTURE WITH HIS DANCING MASTER'S DAUGHTERS.
From his Autobiography.
Whilst I employed myself in various studies and researches, I did not neglect the pleasures incident to youth. At Strasburg every day and hour offers to the sight the magnificent monument of the Minister, and to the ear the movements and music of the dance. My father himself had given my sister and me our first lessons in this art. We had learned the grave minuet from him. The solos and pas-de-deux of the French theatre, whilst it was with us at Francfort, had given me a greater relish for the pleasures of dancing, but, from the unfortunate termination of my love affair with Margaret, I had entirely neglected it. The taste revived in me at Strasburg. On Sundays and holydays, joyous troops, met for the purpose of dancing, were to be seen in all directions. There were little balls in all the country houses, and nothing was talked of but the brilliant routs expected in the winter. I was therefore apprehensive of finding myself out of my element in company, unless I qualified myself to figure as a dancer, and I accordingly took lessons of a master recommended by one of my friends. He was a true French character, cold and polished. He taught with care, but without pedantry. As I had already had some practice, he was not dissatisfied with me.
He had two daughters who were both pretty, and the elder of whom was not twenty. They were both good dancers. This circumstance greatly facilitated my progress, for the awkwardest scholar in the world must soon have become a passable dancer with such agreeable partners. They were both extremely amiable: they spoke only French; I endeavored to appear neither awkward nor ridiculous to them, and I had the good fortune to please them. Their father did not seem to have many scholars, and they lived very much alone. They several times asked me to stay and converse after my lesson, which I very readily did. I was much pleased with the younger one; the manners of both were very becoming: the elder, who was at least as handsome as her sister, did not please me so much, although she took more pains to do so. At the hour of my lesson she was always ready to be my partner, and she frequently prolonged the dance. The younger, although she behaved in a friendly manner towards me, kept a greater distance, and her father had to call her to take her sister's place.
One evening, after the dance, I was going to lead the elder to the apartment, but she detained me. "Let us stay here awhile," said she; "my sister, I must own to you, is at this moment engaged with a fortune teller, who is giving her some intelligence from the cards respecting an absent lover, a youth extremely attached to Emily, and in whom all her hopes are placed. My heart," continued she, "is free: I suppose I shall often see the gilt of it despised." On this subject I paid her some compliments. "You may," said I, "consult the oracle, and then you will know what to expect. I have a mind to consult it likewise: I shall be glad to ascertain the merit of an art in which I have never had much confidence." As soon as she assured me the operation was ended, I led her into the room. We found her sister in good humor—she behaved in a more friendly manner than usual. Sure, as she seemed to be, of her absent lover, she thought there was no harm in showing some attentions to her sister's, for in that light she regarded me. We engaged the fortune-teller, by the promise of a handsome recompense, to tell the elder of the young ladies and me our fortunes also. After all the usual preparation and ceremonies, she shuffled the cards for this beautiful girl; but having carefully examined them, she stopped short, and refused to explain herself. "I see plainly," said the younger of the girls, who was already partially initiated into the mysteries of this kind of magic, "there is something unpleasant which you hesitate to tell my sister." The other sister turned pale, but recovering herself, entreated the sybil to tell her all she had seen in the cards without reserve. The latter, after a deep sigh, told her that she loved, but was not beloved in return; that a third stood between her and her beloved: with several other tales of the same kind. The embarrassment of the poor girl was visible. "Let us see whether a second trial will be more fortunate," said the old woman, again shuffling and cutting the cards, but it was still worse this time. She wished to make a third trial, in hopes of better success, but the inquisitive fair one could bear it no longer, and burst into a flood of tears. Her beautiful bosom was violently agitated. She turned her back on us and ran into the next room. I knew not what to do; inclination detained me with her sister—compassion urged me to follow the affected one. "Console Lucinda," said the former; "go to her." "How can I console her," said I, "without showing her the least signs of attachment? I should be cold and reserved. Is this the moment to be so? Come with me yourself. I know not," replied Emily, "whether my presence would be agreeable to her." We were, however, going in to speak to her, but we found the door bolted. In vain we knocked, called, and entreated Lucinda; no answer. "Let us leave her to herself," said Emily—"she will see no one." What could I do? I paid the fortune-teller liberally for the harm she had done us, and withdrew.
I durst not return to the sisters the next day.
On the third day, Emily sent to desire me to come to them without fail. I went accordingly. Towards the end of the lesson Emily appeared; she danced a minute with me; she never displayed so much grace, and the father declared he had never seen a handsomer couple dancing in his room. After the lesson, the father went out, and I enquired for Lucinda. "She is in bed," said Emily, "but do not be uneasy; when she thinks herself ill, she suffers the less from her afflictions; and whatever she may say, she has no inclination to die, it is only her passion that torments her. Last night she declared to me she should certainly sink under her grief this time, and desired that, when she should be near her end, the ungrateful man who had gained her heart, for the purpose of ill-treating her, should be brought to her." "I cannot reproach myself with giving her any reason to imagine me in love with her," I exclaimed; "I know one who can very well testify in my favor on this occasion."—"I understand you," answered Emily. "It is necessary to come to a resolution to spare us all much vexation. Will you take it ill if I entreat you to give over your lessons? My father says you have now no further occasion for them; and that you know as much as a young man has occasion to know for his amusement." "And is it you, Emily, who bid me banish myself from your presence?" "Yes, but not merely of my own accord. Listen to me—after you left us the day before yesterday, I made the fortune-teller cut the cards for you; the same fortune appeared thrice, and more clearly each time. You were surrounded by friends, by great lords—in short, by all kinds of happiness and pleasure: you did not want for money; women were at a certain distance from you, my poor sister, in particular, remained afar off. Another was nearer to you, and with not quite so much from you that I think it was myself. After this confession you ought not to take my advice amiss. I have promised my heart and hand to an absent friend, whom I have hitherto loved above all the world. What a situation would be yours, between two sisters, one of whom would torment you with her passion, the other with her reserve; and all this for nothing, for a momentary attachment; for even had we not known who you are, and the hopes you have, the cards would have informed us. Farewell," added she, leading me to the door, "and since it is the last time we shall see each other, accept a mark of friendship which I could not otherwise have given you." At these words she threw her arms round my neck, and gave me a kiss in the most tender manner.
At the same moment a concealed door opened, and her sister, in a pretty morning undress, rushed towards us, and exclaimed, "You shall not be the only one to take leave of him." Emily let me go. Lucinda embraced me, and held me closely to her bosom. Her beautiful black hair caressed my face. She remained for some time in this situation, and thus had I found myself between the two sisters in the very distressing predicament that Emily had warned me of. At length Lucinda, quitting her hold of me, fixed her eyes on me with a serious air, and then walking up and down the room with hurried steps, and at length threw herself upon a sofa. Emily approached her, but Lucinda pushed her back. Then commenced a scene which I still recollect with pain. It was not a theatrical one, there was but too much truth in the passion of this young and lively Frenchwoman.
Lucinda overwhelmed her sister with reproaches
