ALL WOMEN WHO WORK

Should Know how this Worker was Made Strong and Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Zahl, N. Dakota. "I was nervous and weak and was not regular. I also had pains frequently. I was sickly for seven years and finally had a nervous breakdown following an operation. I am a dressmaker and milliner, and a lady I work for told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am taking it and it has made me well and able to do my work again. I have even helped take care of a sick neighbor recently, so you can see how it is. I highly praise your medicine and you may use my letter as you see fit. I hope it will help some other woman." Mrs. OLE NORD-LEM, Box 23, Zahl, North Dakota.

LONG RANGE GUNS MENACE TO FARMER

Goshen, Sept. 28.—Farmers in this town are complaining of the dangers they are being subjected to through the firing of long range rifles by parties, the identities of whom have not been ascertained. One prominent farmer, residing a short distance from Owen's Station, stated this morning that while he and others were employed in a field on his farm three bullets whizzed by their heads at short intervals. "The long-distance rifles can shoot a mile, and such recklessness should be discontinued," he declared. "If it is not some life will pay the penalty as in the case I speak of, had the bullets passed only a few inches nearer, one of us would have been shot. I tell you it is not a very pleasant sensation to hear bullets whizzing past your head and realizing that you are in danger of being struck any moment on your own property. Those who shoot these rifles should plan to have the bullets go into a hill and not fire at random."

TEACHERS EYE BURNED BY CURLING IRON

Pine Bush, Sept. 23.—Miss Mildred Jansen, instructor in French in the local high school, ran a hot curling iron in her eye last week. She is recuperating nicely. Some person entering Miss Jansen's room attracted her attention and this distraction was the cause of the accident. Miss Marion Baker is substituting for Miss Jansen in the school.

Legend of the Raven

There is an ancient belief that the raven was originally white but was turned black for its disobedience. The Greek legend is that Apollo sent the bird to the fountain for water but on arrival it found a fig tree with fruit so nearly ripe that it decided to wait until it was quite so; and, since an excuse for the delay was necessary, it brought back to the god a water snake in his pincer with the explanation that the creature had drunk the fountain dry.—Exchange.

Finns Trained to Work

Finns are good athletes by force of circumstances. They get their training from the day they are born. When the child is old enough to go to school gymnastics is a part of his education and when he or she has graduated from the school there is strenuous work ahead, work for existence. Women must work as well as men. They are not afraid or ashamed to do hard work, attend the cattle, milk the cows and work in the fields.—Buffalo Express.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

WILDERNESS OF THOUGHT

MANY of the highest prized things in life, often through carelessness, neglect or perverted habits, are lost amid a wilderness of weeds, whose rankness had been permitted to overtop a wealthy soil. Penelope's flower garden, which she elected to call "her own," was beautifully laid out and gave great promise, but in an evil day, when she grew weary of pulling out the tares and watering the buds, the weeds ran amuck and ruined the plot about which Penelope had dreamed for weeks. When put to the test she preferred the melancholy weeds to the rose and the lily. And so it was with William, who had planned great things while in college, but the weeds crept in among his cherished ambitions and led him far, far afield in a direction he never suspected. Up to a given point he was a faithful worker, so long as his boyish hopes brightened his sky, but when they faded his lost interest and did not care. Then came the day when the garden was choked with weeds. He smiled complacently and accepted his fate because he believed in luck. He had never been taught to hold to the anchor of faith. But William had learned some risky games of chance, and could, when suddenly called upon to do so, shut his mouth very firmly and exhibit not the slightest sign of fear or discouragement. He meant to be good and true, and he sought to be fortunate and happy, but the weeds smothered him. The brilliant course he had considered must wait till another season, or at least until he shall give proof of his change of heart. He has ample ability, but even with his fine talents there springs up at regular intervals a crop of hot-headed weeds, sometimes growing in the night to present a sickening spectacle in the morning. William is but a name for a thousand young men who, in spite of paternal advice, insisted upon sowing their wild oats. William has won the name of being wild and reckless, which he admits. He recognizes that he is a sort of moral cripple, too weak to strike out alone, too proud to accept advice. He is to be pitied, for he really is not bad at heart and is nobody's enemy but his own. A MYSTERY

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

HAPPENED on a mystery. Anyway it was to me; On the bank I found a book Down beside a shady brook, Yes, sir, yonder by "the creek" Found a brown arithmetic. How it got there, hard to tell; Maybe put there, maybe fell. There it lay, a book of sums Bearing marks of snudgy thumbs, Looking blankly at the sky Just as though it wondered why, How it got there. That to me Also is a mystery. Near it was a fishing-hole. I could swear I saw a pole From the bushes sticking out— It was there without a doubt, Not a split bamboo affair, Just an alder cut somewhere. And it seemed to me the line Wasn't silk, but cotton twine. On the water, seemed to me, Something else that I could see: Just a cork, a cork of brown, Slowly bobbing up and down. It's a mystery, as I say; For I'm sure there's school today. (© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Swans Not Songsters

Swans have been favorites of people since ancient times. Greeks called them the birds of Apollo. There are two fine species of swans in America—the Trumpeter and the Whistler. They build their nests along the shores of lakes and on islands, from the Dakotas north to the Arctic regions. People used to believe that a swan sang but once, and that was when it was dying. This is not true. The swans are great trumpeters, but they never sing.

Chapters in Bible Alike
