SUNDERLAND BROTHERS - Rensselaer Falls—Harrison A. Sunderland, 79, and his brother, Clarence E. Sunderland, 74, several weeks ago filed their saws and axes themselves and started for the Sunderland wood lot, up the South Road, to cut the 40 to 50 cord supply of wood for their two homes for the coming year.

The wood is cut "sled length" and brought home on their own sled, drawn by their own horses. Part of the wood is cut up by a sawing machine, hired for the purpose.

But "Harry" prefers to cut his wood with a buck saw, so it will be of even length. The neighbors assert that when the wood is piled, it is done so accurately, that it would be easy to paint and varnish the side of the wood pile.

The Sunderland brothers have enjoyed this little annual wood-cutting task together for 50 years. That the Sunderland "boys" may live to enjoy many more of these annual outings is the wish of their host of friends and neighbors.
