Military Pageant Slated At Old Fort Wellington

The 175th anniversary of the St. Lawrence River’s battlefront, Fort Wellington, will be commemorated in a major military pageant this weekend, July 17-19, when the 60-man Historic Military Pageant is staged at Fort Wellington. Located on the Canadian side of the St. Lawrence River, directly opposite the U.S. in Prescott, Ontario, Fort Wellington was occupied by the British in 1812 to defend the Canadian border. The site has been maintained in its original state by the federal government.

The military pageant is a salute to Canada’s military history and several of the recent engagements that oaths. It was near France and British North America, will be the dominant part of the pageant. For the first time a United States naval gun will take part in the colorful program. The "First Maryland Revolutionary War Regiment" from Alexandria, Maryland will assume a firing role, with the wind and other aspects of the pageant. The regiment will take part in the same firing role as the pageant. The regiment will fire on target or target area. The pageant will take place on the St. Lawrence River.

The other historic British regiments, the Fort Henry Guard, will fire muskets at 1:30 p.m. and will feature these sites in various ceremonial and battle formations, complete with the firing of ancient cannons and muskets. This is a "popular" role, and the local Ontario Historical Society will conduct a musket firing demonstration at 1:00 p.m.

The Canadian military role will be a new feature on the St. Lawrence River. The pageant will feature the largest collection of military pageant vehicles ever assembled on the St. Lawrence River.

A community supper, July 17, 6 p.m., is open to the public.
