Agnew Troubleshooter For Governors' Group

SAN JUAN, P.R. (AP) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew has agreed to become chief Washington troubleshooter for the nation's governors, and he began the task by assuring them a voice as the administration drafts new wage-price restraints.

Agnew, who addresses the opening session of the 63rd National Governors Conference today, extended President Nixon's invitation to the conference executive committee to meet with the President at the White House on Thursday.

He said Nixon wants to discuss with the nine committee members the system of economic restraints that will be instituted after the current wage-price freeze ends on Nov. 12.

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes of Missouri, the conference chairman, complained of a breakdown in relations between state and federal government. The executive committee Sunday asked Agnew to take full charge of liaison and state problems with Washington. Hearnes said Agnew agreed. "We need a troubleshooter," said Hearnes.

President Nixon already had designated Agnew his administration's liaison man with governors, but the assignment had been handled day-to-day.

NO DELIVERY CHARGE
 BALTIMORE (AP) — They weren't magic carpets, but three Persian rugs were spirited out of a downtown department store—under the arms of three men.

A clerk at the store said he saw the men leaving with the rugs, but thought they had been purchased. The rugs were valued at $8,269.

day by Nils A. Roe, former governor of South Dakota, who resigned to become a judge of the U.S. Customs Court.

Hearnes told the governors today that Congress and the federal bureaucracy have been unwilling to fashion a new partnership with the states.

"Instead of a new federalism, we are witnessing an accelerating and adverse alteration of existing intergovernmental relationships in this country," the Missouri Democrat said.

Nixon, meanwhile, acted to reassure the governors that the administration is not shelving—although it is postponing—the welfare reform and revenue-sharing programs most of them advocate.

On the eve of the conference, advocates of independence for Puerto Rico staged a mass march past the El San Juan Hotel, where the governors are meeting, and rallied nearby. Police estimates of the peaceful demonstration ranged up to 25,000. For more than an hour, the demonstrators marched past the hotel on an avenue lined with police. They waved Puerto Rican flags, and some chanted "Yankee go home."
