Kelly comments...

By CHARLES W. KELLY

Mr. Kelly, head of the career education planning committee which has been developing the proposed course of study for the city's high schools, was asked recently about the possibility of the course being approved by the Board of Education. He said that he hoped it would be, but that he was not sure. He added that the committee was still working on the final draft of the proposal and that it would be presented to the Board in January.

The course, which is designed to prepare students for careers in the field of electronics, will cover topics such as electronic components, circuit analysis, and troubleshooting. It is intended for students who are interested in pursuing a career in electronics, and it will provide them with the knowledge and skills they need to succeed in this field.

Emergency Plans 'Late'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. military's emergency plans for a possible war in the Middle East are still being developed, despite mounting evidence that tensions are increasing in the region.

The plans, which were first announced in February, are intended to provide a rapid response in the event of a war. However, they have not yet been finalized and are still being reviewed by military officials.

In the meantime, the United States is taking steps to increase its military presence in the region. The Pentagon has announced that it will deploy additional troops to the Middle East, and it has also increased its spending on defense.

Rush On For Steam Power

CAYUGA (N.Y., Apr. 1) — Major changes in the state's electric power system are正在 being studied, but some New York utilities worry that they may not be able to afford the additional costs. The utilities are looking at a variety of options, including the construction of new power plants and the purchase of more expensive fuel.

One option being considered is the construction of a new power plant in Cayuga. The plant would be able to produce 200 megawatts of electricity, which would be enough to supply power to a large number of homes.

Senate Convenes Today: 1st Sunday Session In 112 Years

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate convened today for the first session in 112 years. The session will be held on Sunday, which is the first day of the legislative session. The Senate will be considering legislation related to the ongoing economic recession.

The Senate is considering a number of bills, including a proposal to increase funding for education and a measure to provide relief to businesses affected by the recession. The Senate is also considering a number of other bills, including a proposal to increase funding for transportation and a measure to provide relief to homeowners affected by the recession.

Amendment May Cut Thousands From Medicaid

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A group of Senate Democrats is considering a proposal to cut Medicaid funding by $1 billion. The proposal would be financed through a combination of increased taxes and cuts to other state programs.

The proposal is part of a broader plan to address the ongoing economic recession. The plan also includes a proposal to increase funding for education and a measure to provide relief to businesses affected by the recession.
