

Clarkson Institute Chief Faces Sex Charges

BY LARRY ROBINSON
POTSDAM — A 43-year-old former Clarkson University department head wanted for questioning in more than 50 sexual abuse cases across the United States and Canada was arrested by state police Thursday.

Canton-based state police say that Thad Paul Alton, 43, of Route 2, Potsdam, was charged with two counts of sexual abuse, third degree. Just four days ago, Alton abruptly relinquished his position as the director of Clarkson University's Management Institute.

State police began searching for Alton Tuesday morning. He was arrested at approximately 10 a.m. Thursday when police spotted his vehicle between Canton and Potsdam. He was initially charged by investigators with two counts of sexual abuse, third degree.

Police say the arrest stems from allegations that Alton had sexual contact with two 14-year-old boys, one from Potsdam and the other from the Brasher area in 1987.

Alton was arraigned before Parishville Town Justice Dean Wilson and was released after posting $2,000 bail, according to police.

State police Bureau of Criminal Investigation Investigator Richard Babcock said Alton's arrest comes as a result of a month-long investigation involving agents in New York, New Jersey, Wisconsin and Canada.

Babcock said that "more than 50" allegations of sexual abuse of minors going back as far as seven years have been uncovered as a result of that investigation, and he noted additional charges are expected to be filed against the Potsdam man.

Outside of his duties at Clarkson University, Alton was an avid kayaker and served as an instructor for the North Country Kayaking Association — a youth sporting club centered in the Stockholm area.

One member, who asked not to be identified, said Alton was a leader in the club's activities, which includes organizing kayaking competitions for North Country youngsters around the United States and Canada.

Attempts to reach Alton for comment have been unsuccessful.

While state police would not comment on the exact number of local youths who may be involved in the on-going sexual abuse investigation, another officer close to the case described that figure as "quite a few."

"This investigation is going to have some far reaching ramifications," said Babcock, who pointed out that he did not feel that any out-of-state extradition proceedings will take place because of the legal complexities of subpoenaing children.

"There are definitely going to be more charges. The investigation so far has uncovered cases involving more than 50 kids," said Babcock.

"All of the kids involved have

Continued On Page 12

Waddington's Chamber Picks Best In Contest

WADDINGTON — The Waddington Chamber of Commerce announces the winners in their 4th annual decorating contest. Each winner will be mailed a check in the near future from the chamber, according to chamber member Liz Phillips.

The winners are:

In the original category — 1st place Lisa Locey of Rt. 345 $25; 2nd place Alice Agen of St. Lawrence Ave. $15; 3rd place Lloyd Sheets of the River Road $10; Judy Sharlow of Rt. 37 $5; 5th place Ernest Blair $5.

In the Religious category — 1st place W. Evans Smith of Rt. 37, $25; Heritage House of Lincoln Ave., $15; Phil Spadaccini of Lagrassie St., $10.

In the traditional category — 1st place Robert Smith of Brookview Drive, $25; 2nd place Mary Hanna of St. Lawrence Avenue, $15; Richard Lauterbach of Greene St., $10.

Honorable mention: Emmy Pemberton, Mart Hanel, Larry Clark, Matt & Jane Layo, Terry Caswell, Larry Burns and Howard Pruner.

Decorating Contest Winners Noted

HAMMOND — The Hammond Volunteer Fire Department has honored several homeowners and businesses in the Hammond area as winners of their annual Christmas Decorating Contest.

Winning first place in the contest was Wayne and Lottie Bertram of the Webster Road who won a $75 prize.

In second place: $50 Clarence and Sally Custer on Main St.

The following homes won Honorable Mention in the contest: Dean and Cherie Rogers of Rt. 37; Harold and Rhonda Cazzoli of the Cook Road; Frank and Beulah Valerio of Main St.; Hammond Service Center, Main St.; Citizens Telephone, Main St.; Paul and Robin Paddock of Lake St. and David and Judy Schubert of the Split Rock Road. Hammond Fire Department.

Psych Center Donates To UW

"With a $9,700 contribution to the United Way's 1989-90 campaign," said an administrative member at the St. Lawrence Psychiatric Center in Ogdensburg, "together we care — and it shows!"

We know that finding help for problems and community needs can be frustrating. We hope that our 30 percent increase in contribution to the United Way Campaign can help," said an employee. "We're sure it will!"

As Donald Ballou, Executive Vice-President of the United Way of St. Lawrence & Franklin Counties puts it: "Our contributions broaden the United Way's environment in addressing community needs. From the services supplied by the agencies we support; for example, counseling to rehabilitation and teaching, to providing vital emotional support, you as contributors, are part of the full scope of caring which affects our communities. Thanks to you, it works for all of us!"

Santa Boards Seaway Ship, Brings Cheer

BY LAURIE RAMIE
MASSENA — You'd never guess who was aboard one of the last ships to pass through the Eisenhower Lock during the 1989 shipping season.

The weather was decidedly North Pole-like for the appearance of Santa Claus, fondly known as "Seaway Santa" to workers and visitors of the St. Lawrence Seaway.

For those who braved the cold, Santa could be found around 7 p.m. last evening standing aboard the Quebecois, merrily ringing a large brass bell and passing out bags of candy.

WINS CHRISTMAS PRIZE — Joe Montgomery, center, has won the Christmas stocking prize at Garns Supply in Ogdensburg. At left is James Boprey, manager, and at right is Michelle Alkerton, Garns employee who drew the winning ticket with Montgomery's name. (Koch Photo)

Heritage Mall Developers Plan New Shopping Center Plaza

BY LAURIE RAMIE

MASSENA — The developers of a $55 million mall here say that an "overwhelmingly positive response" from prospective tenants and clientele has spurred their interest in also building a $10-15 million strip center that will employ an additional 650 people.

"Retailers who visit the Massena mall site sense the excitement that is building for St. Lawrence Centre, and that makes them much more excited to become part of the area," said Anthony C. LaValle, managing partner for Heritage Companies, based in Syracuse.

St. Lawrence Plaza will provide rental space for a proposed nine specialty or daily convenience-oriented stores who typically operate just outside a mall to capitalize on its captive traffic.

Heritage came before the Town Planning Board last night with an architectural, environmental and legal representative in tow to present a first look at sketches of the St. Lawrence Plaza.

LaValle explained that the plans are now ready for review by both local and county regulatory agencies, which was the purpose of their brief preliminary presentation last night.

The meeting resulted in promises by the Town Planning Board that they would accept lead agency status for the project and would also forward the detailed plans to the St. Lawrence County Planning Board for prompt review.

The nine slots designated for occupation in the plaza have just about all been rented, LaValle told the Daily Courier-Observer after the meeting, but announcements of which retailers will locate there await a future date.

The one specialty store that has been firmly nailed down is the plaza's anchor tenant, a 52,000 square foot supermarket called Sun Foods that also has a branch location in Plattsburgh.

"Sun Foods is a one-of-a-kind supermarket that will attract people from a large area because of its wide variety of fresh food, full line of seafood, full deli and low, warehouse prices," LaValle said.

If the environmental assessment review meets with approval from the town and county planners, Heritage intends to begin construction of the plaza in the spring, with opening set for fall of 1990. St. Lawrence Centre is slated to open Aug. 1.

Town Planning Board Chairman William T. Blair stressed last night that while the board was looking favorably upon the plans as presented, their chief concern would be for the residents of that commercial area.

LaValle gave assurances that the company is going beyond legal requirements to insure that everyone remains happy with the development.

Massena Country Club Members Decide To Build Club House

BY LAURIE RAMIE

MASSENA — An overwhelming majority of the Massena Country Club membership voted Tuesday night to construct a new clubhouse, even though that plan carries a half-million-dollar pricetag.

Approximately 70-percent of the 325 members participated in the 7:30 p.m. single question election, and of those, an estimated 96-percent voted in favor of rebuilding, according to sources who attended the private session.

Presented to the members were two options — bring the currently condemned clubhouse back to life with nearly $400,000 in repairs, or spend an estimated $500,000 to raze the building and construct a new facility.

Country Club Board of Directors President James Grenier said late Tuesday night that the desire of the members came through loud and clear with a vote of 217 in favor of a new building, while only 10 suggested that repair would be the better choice. Absentee ballots from those unable to attend the session were also included in that count.

"That option makes me very happy," Grenier said. "It was overwhelmingly in favor of building a new clubhouse and that means the general membership has given us the authority to go ahead with it."

The St. Lawrence River Road clubhouse was condemned several months ago after engineers determined that the 31-year-old structure was unsafe for occupation.

Deterioration of the main support beams was at the heart of the problem, according to the Country Club's Building Committee Chairman Reginald Cross. The Board of Directors has been discussing ways to renew the building's worth for three months, and their work culminated in a Nov. 30 presentation to the membership.

Cross said Tuesday night that he too was pleased the members opted to go for the new building, having said previously that an architectural study of the facility by Sear-Brown Associates of Canton revealed that even strengthening those supports and replacing the hyperbolic roof would provide only 10 more years' worth of wear for the clubhouse.

THE JOURNAL

SECTION TWO FRIDAY, DECEMBER 22, 1989 PAGE 7

Man Charged In Sex Abuse Case In City

BY MARK PURSER

A 22-year-old Ogdensburg man was placed in city lock-up early this morning after he was charged with criminal trespass 2nd degree and sexual abuse 3rd degree — both misdemeanors — after he allegedly forced himself on a woman after removing her clothing, according to city court files.

Edward J. Shaver of 214 Pero Lane was arrested at 1:05 a.m. this morning on two warrants from city court, police said.

Shaver was accused of refusing to leave a woman's home after being asked. The woman's age was unavailable but police said she was in her 20's.

The woman lives in Ogdensburg. He was accused of removing the woman's clothing against her will. Shaver allegedly pulled the woman's pants down to her ankles and sexually abused her while preventing her from getting up, city court records show.

Shaver is also accused of fondling her breasts, according to files in city court.

Police say when Shaver came to the woman's home on Dec. 8 the woman thought it was a friend from work knocking at her door, police said.

Police say that after Shaver sexually abused the woman, he left her residence.

She later filed paperwork against Shaver at city police headquarters.

Police say the victim informed them that Shaver had possibly been drinking before he forced himself on her.

Shaver is currently in city-lock up in lieu of $500 bail. He is expected to be arraigned later today, according to city court officials said.

Police said the delay in the arrest stemmed from a delay by the District Attorney's office. The District Attorney's office requires that all requests for warrants be reviewed by the DA's office before they go to city court.

Mashaw Admits He Stole Purse, $1,100 At Rose's

BY PATRICIA BULLOCK

An Ogdensburg man has admitted he stole a purse belonging to Rose McLoughlin from Rose's Tavern on Ford Street November 16, which contained $1,100 as part of a plea agreement with the District Attorney's office.

Earlier this week, Daniel Mashaw, 25, had his plea agreement thrown out when he told the court he didn't remember taking the purse.

Mashaw is represented by Atty. Charles B. Nash.

Mashaw tried to plead guilty to grand larceny, fourth degree, and attempted possession of a forged instrument, second degree. He had been charged with taking the purse and trying to cash a check for $175 on the account of Tony J. Baker.

Earlier this week he claimed he had been told he took the purse, but that he did not remember taking it. However, Mashaw did admit he had the money in his possession at the time of his arrest.

St. Lawrence County Court Judge Eugene L. Nicandri threw out the plea arrangement after Mashaw claimed he did not remember taking the money and after he refused to tell the court who the $175 check was made out to.

Judge Nicandri accepted the pleas Thursday morning after Mashaw told the court he had taken the money and that he was aware who the check was made out to.

Mashaw had been indicted for grand larceny, fourth degree, and criminal possession of a forged instrument, second degree. He is currently facing an additional one-year sentence for a violation of probation for consuming alcohol while on probation.

He had been sentenced to serve a six-month term in St. Lawrence County Correctional Facility and placed on five years probation for burglarizing Dom's Tavern.

City Hires Peccolo As New Building Inspector

BY EVAN LAMBROU

Ogdensburg officials have hired a city man to serve as building inspector to handle the city's planned crackdown on slum housing.

Joseph Peccolo will be starting his job on January 2, but the city officials say they will also have to fill the building inspector's position held by Robert Breen who quit his post Thursday, according to City Manager John Krol.

Peccolo was originally hired to handle the enforcement of building codes at existing buildings. City officials said when they created the post that the city hopes to examine apartment buildings in the city to determine if they meet safety and health codes.

"The second code enforcement officer's position was created by the city council as part of our efforts to upgrade the community's rental housing," Krol said.

"Mr. Peccolo brings with him 35 years of experience to the job, with construction, management and operating engineer's knowledge for the position. He will play a key role in enforcing the city's zoning codes," the city manager said.

City officials have said that with the new homes, the townhouse development and the proposed high rise expected to be built next year, the city is hoping to crackdown on substandard buildings and apartments.

With new housing units that will become available, city officials hope to force landlords to upgrade the apartment units already available.

Remington Museum's Silver Statues Detailed In Delta Magazine

BY TERRY KOCH

The Remington Museum of Ogdensburg is probably in a holding pattern over an airport somewhere in the world right now.

Actually, the museum is probably over many airports and air-borne over most continents.

The Remington and its limited edition silver castings are the subject of an article in a magazine aboard the domestic and international flights of a major airline.

The magazine giving the museum worldwide exposure is "Sky," put out by Delta Airlines, and the article is called "Cast in Silver."

The article is about limited silver castings of famous works; it focuses more specifically on castings of the Statue of Liberty and of Frederic Remington's "The Broncho Buster" by Silversmiths Group, USA.

It's sprinkled with quotes from Lowell McAllister, Executive Director of the Remington.

McAllister is quoted as saying that he and the museum's board of directors decided after three years to participate in Philip Friedman's

"Silversmiths USA" project, "and today they are glad they did."

"Mr. Remington's work has been around long enough to be in the public domain," McAllister is quoted as saying. "Anyone can reproduce it. The museum has no control over quality and receives no royalties."

"Silversmiths offered a way to reproduce the work that we could control — in terms of quality, number, and advertising — and a way to receive royalties for the museum's endowment," McAllister says in the article.

The article also gives prominent mention to Ogdensburg as the home of the museum, and features large photos of "The Broncho Buster" and of Remington himself.

The story mentions that Silversmiths USA brought the idea to Liberty Mint of Utah.

"After financial-newletter guru Howard Ruff, as majority stockholder in Liberty Mint, recommended the first edition Broncho Buster to his most elite list of subscribers," the article says, "it sold out with breath-taking speed. Mountain Man and The Rattlesnake immediately went into production. At $25,000 each, some 220 of the total three-edition series of 300 replicas have been sold to date.

"It is safe to say that what we have here is a trend," writes Chancery Mabe, the author of the article in "Sky" magazine.

Ruff is quoted as saying that the precious-metal value is "less than it is being sold for, but gives it cachet. It is extraordinarily unique. The real value is that they are limited, endorsed by the Remington Museum."

And, added Ruff, "The only way to market these statues is as objects of beauty. Potential appreciation is a plus. If a guy is purely interested in an investment, I'd tell him to go for a seasoned investment instrument."

"I don't think the investment value will be several times the original purchase price. But that's not why I bought one, and that's not how they're being marketed."