BATAVIA DAILY NEWS.

Friday, October 22, 1880. Published daily, Sundays excepted, by the DAILY NEWS PUBLISHING CO.

M. D. MILK, Editor.

It is the opinion of A. Bronson Alcott "that the man who cannot govern children or men either, by moral means, by the power of his eye, the charm of his manners—the resources of his intelligence—is not worthy to control his fellow-creatures." The trouble is that there are children in these degenerate days who may not be able to read this control in the eye, appreciate the charm in the manners or understand the resources of the governing intelligence.

AFFAIRS at the Ute Indian agency do not progress very rapidly toward a settlement. The army has been notified that it has no responsibility for Agent Berry, who is believed to have taken refuge with the Utes to escape from the wrath of the white people, but that the Colorado authorities have full power. There authorities believe Berry largely responsible for the death (or disappearance) of freighter Jackson, and will very likely hang him if they catch him.

A New "Business for Girls. Youth's Companion.

At the great state fair held this year in Pennsylvania in the Centennial buildings, there was an exhibit which would probably have been of use and interest to many young girls.

It was made by an association of ladies who know how many such girls there are, especially in farm-houses, belonging to families of straightened means, who feel every day the grippings of poverty and who would gladly add something to the family income, but whose whole time is occupied by the household work.

These ladies proposed that they should add to their domestic labors an industry which occupies but a short portion of each day during six weeks in spring and six in late summer, which yields a good income, and which will add greatly to the prosperity of the country. It is the raising of silk-worms.

The association furnish instruction, etc., gratuitously; a cocoonery can be begun by any careful, intelligent woman or girl, in a vacant room of her house with a few eggs, provided there are mulberry trees within reach. Any man or boy who knows how to use his hands can make the trays for her without cost.

Silk-worms are a capital which increase with prodigious rapidity; the cocoons and fluss silk bring in from one dollar to one hundred and fifty dollars per pound. Our silk manufacturers have been obliged to import raw silk which could just as well have been raised at home, and the production of which would have helped many a poor woman to comfort and happiness. The exhibit of cocoons and silk made by the association was from cocooneries established by just such women.

The young girls of America belonging to the industrial class should not slight these methods of earning a living which involve a little technical knowledge and labor, but which can be carried on at home under the protection of their fathers' roof.
