American Marriages Increase

Year Marriages
1965 1,802,000
1964 1,724,000
1963 1,656,000

An increase in marriages is keeping pace with the nation's population growth, reflecting the growing numbers of people reaching marriageable age each year. In 1965, the marriage rate at 9.3 per 1,000 population, including military personnel overseas, was the highest since 1956.

These strange objects resemble fancy millinery creations but their purpose is far more deadly—anti-submarine warfare. They are electric circuit boards for a device which simulates the maneuvers of enemy submarines so that appropriate action may be taken. Here, the circuits are checked out in final assembly at Clevite Corp. in Cleveland, Ohio.
