Enjoying Retirement Job as Conductor on Possum Trot Railroad

Railroad Attracts Thousands

By LEONARD E. PRINCE

The Reader has had several visits from an extra mile in the business of providing a service to people, and the conductor at the Reader Railroad, located in the Possum Trot Lake, near Alexandria, is more popular. In the city of Alexandria, more than 3,000 people ride the Reader Railroad to and from their homes.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman B. Godfrey, the conductor and his wife, are a very popular couple in the area. Mr. Godfrey has spent his entire life in the railroad business, having started as a young boy and working his way up to become a conductor.

The Reader Railroad is a narrow-gauge railroad that was built by the Baldwin Locomotive Works in World War II. However, it apparently was not used for its intended purpose and was later converted into a tourist attraction.

The reader railroad has been a success and has brought in many people, especially from the University of Vermont. They have been very interested in the railroad and have asked many questions about its history and operation.

The Reader Railroad is a single-track railroad, and it is not uncommon for more than one person to be riding on the same train. In fact, it is not unusual for the conductor to be seen riding on the train with his passengers.

Route of The Reader

The Reader Railroad is a short distance from Cedar Grove, and it is a popular destination for tourists. The train departs from Cedar Grove and makes a round trip of 161,000 pounds. The Reader purchased the locomotive and trestle from the Valley Lumber Company in June 1942.

While the train is in operation, the conductor is always ready to answer questions from the passengers. He is a very knowledgeable and friendly person who enjoys sharing his knowledge about the railroad and its history.

The Reader Railroad is not only a popular tourist attraction, but it is also a great place for families to spend a day together. The conductor's dedication to his job and his passion for the railroad make him a very special person to the people of the reader area.
