

ADDS 16 TO FAMILY—Brandy of Gateway lies here with her new family of 16 pups, born last Friday. Brandy, 6-year-old registered St. Bernard dog, owned by Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Elsworth of North Greenwich is used to having good sized litters, but this was her biggest. Altogether she has had 89 puppies in four litters. The sire of the pups is Duke of Ranscott, also a registered St. Bernard. Brandy was 14 hours delivering her pups, from 4 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday. Four, three males and one female, have died, but there are six males and six females alive and demanding nourishment. Brandy can nurse eight at a time, and for the moment is managing to feed all 12 on a rotation method, but the Elsworths have bottles ready to help feed the puppies when it gets too much of a chore for their mother. Another addition at the Elsworth home is a raccoon, about a month old. The coon was found along the roadside by Jack Wheelton who gave it to the Elsworths last week, and in the few days it's been there has become a family pet, and seems perfectly happy to roam around the house and yard, climb the trees and dine on milk, ice cream, eggs and crackers.

Your Life Is an Open Book To Many Agencies in Country

(Special to the Journal)
Much more is known about the personal affairs of each and every resident of Washington county than they would imagine.

In the official records of federal, state and local bureaus and in the private files of other organizations is a mass of data covering the social and economic lives of each local person.

Where he was born, how much education he has had, his marital setup, his earning capacity, where he lived previously, whether he owns his home or rents, whether or not his wife works, if he owns a washing machine, his police record, if he has one, how much he pays in taxes—these and many other facts about him are all in the records.

What brings this matter to the fore at this time is a plan, now under consideration in Washington, for an electronic data center that would bring together and put into computers the wealth of information that is now spread among many governmental agencies in Washington and elsewhere.

One such agency is the Social Security administration. Its files contain information on the earning and employment records of some 24,200 local people who are now holding down jobs, or are self-employed or are retired.

Another source is the FBI, which has the fingerprints of approximately 20,600 residents of Washington county on tap.

Included are the fingerprints of government employees, of men and women who have served in the armed forces, of people who have been charged with felonies and of many others.

Much information concerning local individuals has also emerged from the surveys made by the census bureau. The 411 people in the area who have been divorced and the 1,850 who are foreign-born are thus pinpointed.

This data would be fed into the computers, together with the mass of other facts about the local population.

Opposition has been voiced by congressmen and others, however. They fear the collection and improper use of dossiers on each citizen.

Government spokesmen have assured them that the only purpose of the data bank would be to produce better national statistics and that there would be no unwarranted disclosure of information about individuals.

Scientists Are Starting War On Weevil

Cornell university scientists have launched an all-out offensive against destructive alfalfa weevils that have entrenched themselves in virtually every part of New York state.

Entomologists, plant breeders and agronomists at the New York state college of agriculture, Cornell, have initiated a five-year research project to find more effective ways to combat the increasing menace of this insect pest.

Now found everywhere except for three counties—Franklin, St. Lawrence and Hamilton—the weevil poses the state's biggest single threat to the state's 1.3 million-acre alfalfa crop. Prof. Robert F. Lubeck, agronomist, said.

Lucey is coordinator of the research team, which includes Profs. G. G. Gyrisco, entomologist; C. C. Lowe, plant breeder; B.E. Dethier, climatologist; and C. J. Nelson, field crop physiologist. David Horn, entomology graduate student, will work closely with the team.

Cooperating in this long-term project are Cooperative Extension agents, the U. S. Weather Bureau, the Environmental Science Services Administration, and the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Listen Veteran

Help an eligible serviceman in your family to exercise his privilege to vote in this fall's election by getting him an application for a military ballot. They are now available through the local veterans' counseling center.

A new check list of important veterans benefit reminders for newly discharged veterans is also available at the local veterans' counseling center.

All benefits under the World War II GI Home Loan program will expire on July 25, 1967.

A veteran who is too disabled to travel alone if he is called to a VA hospital for an examination, or if he has been approved for admission to a VA hospital, should request that the VA furnish him transportation enroute to the hospital. This service is particularly needed by blinded veterans.

Excessive income warning. When the income of a person receiving VA pension benefits begins to be received at a rate which, if continued for the year, would cause the income to exceed the set limitation, then the benefit must be adjusted or terminated, effective the last day of the month in which the increased income began to be received. It is important, therefore, that any change in income (for VA pension purposes) be reported immediately.

Questions about the rights and benefits of veterans, servicemen or their dependents may be submitted for individual attention to the New York State Division of Veterans Affairs, County Office Building, Upper Broadway, Fort Edward.
