BARNUM AND BAILEY

GREATEST SHOW ON EARTH

A tribute to 'The Greatest Show On Earth'

By JOAN BRUNSKILL

AP Newsfeatures

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — "Welcome to my museum," says P.T. Barnum, large as life.

"Come in, look around. Let me show you P.T. Barnum and let P.T. Barnum show you a good time."

Then it's on into a world of illusions and reality, of circuses and civic pride, two-headed monsters and solid history.

The taped greeting comes from an animated wooden sculpture of the greatest showman on earth himself, the pioneer all-American impresario, set near the entrance of the Barnum Museum, recently re-opened after a three-year, $7.5 million expansion and renovation.

This is the town where Barnum lived, where he was mayor, where he set up winter headquarters for his circus. It is also the hometown of Tom Thumb.

The museum's rosy, three-story Victorian building, which now has an adjoining gallery, was his last gift to his adopted city and, before reconstruction, attracted about 15,000 visitors annually.

"The challenge our team faced in designing the museum," according to Linda Akshuler, director, "was to create a museum as if Barnum were alive today doing it himself."

From the front door on, that Barnumescque style is well realized, as entertainment and education vie for the visitor's attention, a theatrical flourish here, carefully presented documentary material there.

A first-floor tour begins with a compact core exhibition toward which Nicolas Fasciano's sculpture of the old showman gestures — a table of contents, as it were, kinetic and playful, with a carousel visual theme, historical perspectives, band music, lights, color. There are Victorian optical toys, a zootrope and a massive mirrored praxinoscope, to suggest the magic of the three-ring circus.

Also on the first floor are a video alcove where a 10-minute tape is shown; a full-scale re-creation of the library in one of Barnum's Bridgeport mansions, and varied Barnum memorabilia.

The new 7,000-square-foot gallery, designed by architect Richard Meier, is just off the main lobby. The airy space for special exhibitions is currently filled with carved carousel figures.

The second floor is devoted to life in Bridgeport in the 1800s and to the roles Barnum played in that life, including those of civic leader, legislator, city planner and philanthropist.

Bridgeport is celebrated with a huge merchandise carousel, a towering, eye-catching construction whose revolving levels display local products. There's also a re-creation of part of a 19th-century dress store, and a period drawing room from a local mansion.

A colorful Punch (Barnum) and Judy (the audience) booth booms out an introduction to the third floor, celebrating Barnum the showman. In old-fashioned, glass-fronted display cases, to suggest "the dash and dazzle and great diversity of Barnum's unique collection" are such "treasures" as the Egyptian mummy, the stone that killed Goliath, the lanterns that saved America, the beaded purse of Geronimo's daughter.

Exhibition labels mix fact, fantasy, tongue-in-cheek — they include background material for the famous Fejee Mermaid, described as "one of Barnum's merriest hoaxes."

Also on display are Jenny Lind's piano; Tom Thumb's coaches, clothes and bed; and clown paraphernalia.

About 1,300 square feet are devoted to a model layout, The Circus, scaled down in size but not in scope. There are close to 100,000 pieces, including some 3,000 miniature figures carved over 60 years, beginning in 1929, by William Brinley, an area resident acknowledged as a kind of folk artist.

In addition to the Big Top with its three rings and audience, there's the behind-the-scenes clutter, the circus folks' world and the cook tent, wagons and workshops, with movement and color. All can be viewed from ground level or from an elevated walkway which curves around the installation.

The Barnum Museum Foundation, Inc., was created to organize the renovation and expansion of the city-owned building.

The museum is open Tuesday through Sunday. Admission ranges from $4 for adults to $2 for children ages 4 and over. It has parking nearby and is accessible by public transportation.

A 'raw deal'?

NEW YORK (AP) — Eddie Murphy thinks he got a raw deal from Paramount and a bum rap from Spike Lee.

"Given my personal circumstances and the success of my films, I've got the worst deal in Hollywood," Murphy said in the Aug. 8 issue of Rolling Stone magazine.

He was upset by Jack Nicholson's potential $60 million payday for "Batman," a payoff based on a percentage of the receipts and merchandising rather than the per-film deal that Murphy signed with Paramount Pictures.

"When I renegotiated my deal with Paramount a few years ago, it seemed great," said Murphy. "But nobody planned that my pictures would be as successful as they are. So now I've got a (lousy) deal, compared with what I could be making."

Murphy also said he was angered by fellow filmmaker Lee's charges that he has failed to use his power to help other blacks in Hollywood.
