Albany Convention.

The Brooklyn Eagle calls Mr. Greeley the most profane man in the world.

The New York Standard says this is untrue. Those who are familiar with Mr. Greeley know that he is not by any means in the habit of using profane language. Few Americans are so pure and chaste and proper in their speech.

The Siege of Paris.

A gay and frivolous people, like the Parisians, can go into a siege with hats in the air, and with waving of handkerchiefs from the fair sex. Building walls and earthworks, mounting cannon, and storing a city with millions of bushels of grain and thousands of barrels of beef and pork, and manning the ramparts with a hundred and fifty thousand armed men, ready to sacrifice their lives in defence of the treasures enclosed, being all accomplished, unthinking people may say, as we do to the winds of a cold December night when seated around the glowing fire, "blow and crack your cheeks," you shall not disturb my comfort.

The People of Paris have announced that they are ready, and doubtless they are, so far as all the things can make them so.

Great stress is placed on numbers, when in a certain sense numbers only add to the certainty of speedier capitulation. We do not suppose the Prussian strategist, Moltke, quite expects to take Paris by assault, but through the dire necessities of human nature. He knows, as every thoughtful person knows, that a city of two millions of people cannot long subsist, without fresh supplies from the country. Bread and salt meat, as a diet for a great populace, does very well for a few days, but when subsisted on for a week or two, people begin to desire fresh food—milk, vegetables, fruit and the dainties that come from the country, fresh and palatable, healthful and invigorating. When denied these, sickness begins to take the place of robust, defiant health, first among the children, then among the frailer of the adult population, and as time wears on, complaints begin to rise in high-headed fortresses, and numbers, which at first seemed a source of strength, prove, at last, to be a source not only of weakness, but of insecurity.

We have no doubt Paris can defend itself against assaults to the day of judgment, but she must succumb at last to the horrors of famine and pestilence.

If the French people had not the power, or were so poorly generated that they could not stop the victorious Prussians in the Vosges mountains, at the crossing of the Moselle, the same and the same—nowhere in all the distance from the fortified frontier to the walls of Paris, then France could not have held out for a moment.

The apprehension is unfounded that with his ten thousand pamphlets of veto messages, Gen. Hoffman would flood the State. They are too dry!—Albany Journal.

meat home to win a heat after two legs are broken.

All King William has to do is merely to keep supplies out of Paris, and it must succumb. Sorties will not raise the siege, and there is no army, but Bazaine's at Metz to compel it from the outside. It looks to us as though a chapter of horrors was in store for the gay denizens of Paris, unless Jules Favre succeeds at once in arranging terms of peace. The Prussian army has elbow-room, and can draw its supplies from Germany or gather them from the enemy's country, and stand to its work all winter. But Paris will soon eat its way to famine.

The Republican Candidate for County Clerk.

It matters but little whom the Democrats place in nomination for the office of County Clerk in opposition to Jacob Stears, Jr., the Republican nominee. His deservedly high reputation for duties akin to those of the clerkship are so generally known to the citizens of Jefferson county that we hardly need recount them.

Mr. Stears is now 43 years of age, is a native of Watertown, and familiar with the duties that he will soon be called to discharge.

He was chosen Clerk of the Board of Supervisors seven years ago, and has been recalled to that position with great unanimity every year since. Members of the Board, and the public who have business at his desk, join in acknowledgments of his extraordinary fitness for the place. He is a ready penman, quick to apprehend, affable in manners, and as an executive officer in the discharge of clerical duties has no superior.

Mr. Stears was nine years Assessor of the town of Watertown, and the high appreciation in which his services were held by the people is manifest from the fact that on his first election he received 21 majority, on the second 172, and on the third 237 majority. Since the organization of the city, he has been re-elected by the part of the town in which he resides.

Mr. Stears has a fondness and consequently a fitness for clerical duties. So well do the people understand his capabilities for such duties, that wherever he appears at public meetings, where clerks or secretaries are needed, he is quite sure to be selected to perform the labor of the position. Mr. S. has done a vast amount of gratuitous public service of this kind.

The Convention.

Special Correspondence of TIMES and EXPRESS. ROCHESTER, Sept. 23, 1870. EDITORS REVISED:—Yesterday was a gala day for the Democracy of this city. Their Convention assembled here to listen to the nominations of Wm. M. Tweed. Delegates were here from every district, but Tweed had said the old ticket must be re-nominated and no delegate dared say nay to the Grand Sachem of Tammany. S. J. Tilden called the Convention to order and earnestly invoked the spirit of "Jefferson, the father of Democracy." If by Democracy which assembled at Corinthian Hall yesterday is the offspring of Thomas Jefferson we beseech Tilden to let the spirit of the great father rest in peace, for if it had been really present, we think it would have cried out in anguish, "indeed, it is a wise father who knows his own child."

The Convention was organized, the Young Democracy ruled out without ceremony.

Tweed's site read and approved, a fair amount of gas released, and then adjourned to give place to a general ratification meeting in the evening.

While the crowd was dispersing, one of Tweed's body guard was caught in the act of relieving his friend, S. J. Tilden, of a gold watch.

Fifteen car loads of these "gold" watches were imported by the Erie road, free of expense, to give tone and influence to the Convention. Tweed, you know, is one of the principal directors of this road.

In the evening we were invited to a display of fire works, a torch light procession by street boys, and most speeches by Democratic big guns.

Among the principal speakers were S. S. Cox, Richard O'Gorman, and A. Oakley Hall. The first of these, although misrepresenting the Republican party, said some very sensible things (notwithstanding our friend Greeley to the contrary) against a high protective tariff. He made one statement which left his audience in suspense. While talking of the duties on teas, sugars, coffee, etc., some one cried out, "How about whisky?" "That," said he, "is the Democratic party! I am coming to that one," and after a few more remarks resumed his seat.

The suspension was removed this morning.

The proprietors of the Osborn House announce that they find $2,000 in the till of their bar as the result of one day's sales.

O'Gorman, we will say that out of sympathy we were glad he was allowed to speak.

If he had not been he would undoubtedly have burst. It is strange how so small a man can hold so much wind. He would deliver himself of long rhetorical sentences, and then while waiting for applause, would completely fold his arms and begin to swell, and continue to swell, until he looked very much like a poisoned rat.

Last of all came A. Oakley Hall. If he told the truth once, which we very much doubt, his Democratic friends should not chide him, for he certainly did not intend to do it.

His entire speech was made up of malicious lies, personal vituperation and the lowest order of low blackguardism. It contained neither sense, wit or truth.

The apprehension is unfounded that with his ten thousand pamphlets of veto messages, Gen. Hoffman would flood the State. They are too dry!—Albany Journal.

Body Snatching—Excitement in Clinton.

The Clinton Courier of last Thursday has the following: This community has been shocked by the recent finding of an empty coffin on the premises of Mr. George Bristel, and about one mile in the rear of the residence of Mr. Wm. H. Havens, under such circumstances and with such surroundings as to indicate that a foul crime had been committed against some one of the un-named here.

The coffin was first discovered by two small boys who lived at the Clinton Mill, the 17th of August, and kept secret until about two weeks ago, since which time it has been visited by many people, in hopes to solve the mystery, but it yet remains unexplained.

When found, it was in a lonely gulf, and partially covered by hemlock brush, and had the appearance of having been there two or three months. The top was open, and inside the coffin were some ropes and chains of considerable length, which had in all probability been used in raising it from the place where it had been interred.

The rope was also discovered in several places, as if with blood, and there can be no doubt of a body having been taken from the grave. Why, and from where, may always remain a mystery, but it is a mystery everybody is interested in having solved. And to further this end, after conferring with the proper authorities, Mr. Havens has taken the coffin, and articles found with it into his possession, for the purpose of affording ample opportunity for identification, and it is hoped that a key to the mystery may yet be found, and the guilty parties brought to justice.

There is refreshing simplicity in the account which a Santa Fe editor gives of his fight with Gen. Hayes. "Having nothing to defend myself with," says the abbot, "we made the best possible time—and our friends say it was good—to our office."

Well, David," said a poor but worthy citizen to one of the Wall street magicians, "they say the world has prospered with you and that you are immensely rich." "Well," replied David, "perhaps it is true, but we cannot take our gold with us when we go." "It would melt if you did," was the quiet retort.

The opening chapter of a Western novel contains the following: "All of a sudden the fair girl continued to sit upon the grass, gazing upon the briny deep, on whose heaving bosom the tall ships went swiftly by, freighted with a heavy tell, with how much of joy and sorrow, and pine and lumber, and emigrants, and hope, and salt fish."

FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS, OF A NEW YORK STATE, PAYING 7 PER CENT. IN GOLD.

THE NEW-YORK AND OSWEGO MIDLAND RAILROAD, which will be 400 miles in its total length from New-York to Oswego, including the Albany branch, has nearly completed the 200 miles of ROAD ALREADY COMPLETED AND IN PROGRESS.

THE LOCAL BUSINESS. It is already large, and the company has just concluded a contract with the Delaware and Hudson Gas Company for transporting the coal for that large and wealthy corporation to the northern section of the State. This will add largely to the business and profits of that section of the road, already controlling the local traffic of one of the most populous and fertile districts of the State, that the various branches, without the aid of through business, can handle less than ten per cent on the entire cost, which is 100 per cent in excess of the interest on its bonds.

A STRONG POINT. In regard to these bonds the fact that the lease is strictly limited to $2,000,000 per mile of the railroad, and BEHIND THE BONDS IS A PAID UP CAPITAL OF NEARLY $7,000,000, which affords ample guarantee of the financial strength of the Company.

THE BONDS. They are issued in denominations of $1,000; may be taken on or registered, at the option of the purchaser; bear seven per cent gold interest, free of income tax, payable the first of January and July in New York City, and have twenty five years to run to maturity.

The popularity of these bonds as a perfectly safe security, bearing the highest rate of interest, and their exemption from the payment of any gold tax, free of Government tax, has secured the supply nearly exhausted; and hence recent and early future completion of additional sections will for a time furnish a liberal supply, to which we respectfully invite the attention of investors, in the confident belief that no better security can be found on the market.
