

ing, must send sweet errands of mercy to their afflicted brethren.

Charleston has the reputation of much good feeling—and the calamities which have recently occurred abroad, have tended (without our desiring to profit by the misfortunes of others) greatly to increase the pecuniary resources of our citizens.

While the planter of South Carolina exults in the produce of his last harvest and looks forward with eager hope to continued eyes of increased prosperity, the German peasant, in the vicinity of Bremen, is seeking the bones of his relations among the wrecks of the food, and finds a poisoned soil, which, for years, will yield him nothing. We are accustomed to be generous, we aid the Greek that he may be free—we instruct the savage that he may be civilized—we subsidize missionaries to the Hindoos that his superstitions may die—but the Greek may be happy although a slave, the Indian, contented with his ignorance, and the Hindoo prefers his infidelity to our faith. This is speculative philanthropy—the charity of intellect—the charity of imagination.

Far stronger, and more immediate—more earnest and more impressive, are those appeals which the sorrows of a desolate peasantry, without house or home—of afflicted widows and orphans, of bleeding humanity suffering under an awful dispensation of Providence, carry irresistibly to the heart of the generous and the tender.

When therefore our citizens shall receive, as they will, kind solicitations for the aid of the unfortunate peasants in the vicinity of Bremen—we anticipate with confidence their most cordial reception and liberal reward.

Probable fate of the Wasp.—It is suggested by a correspondent of the Baltimore Federal Gazette, that the account given by an Arab chief of the loss of an English ship, and the total destruction of her crew on the African coast, is probably a detail of the fate of the U. S. sloop of war Wasp, and her unfortunate crew. The Wasp was last seen off Madeira, nearly in the latitude and longitude in which the Spring-grove experienced those heavy storms which drove her to destruction.

The lady of the Ex-Emperor Iturbide and family, at Mexico, are daily expected in New-York, where they purpose establishing their permanent residence.

The word literati, which now confers honor, had at one time a very different signification. Among the Romans it was usual to affix some branding or ignominious letter on the criminal, when the crime was infamous in its nature; and persons so branded were called in-ripti or stigmatici, or by a more equivocal term, literati. The same express on is likewise adopted in Stat. 4. Henry VII., which recites that divers persons lettered had been more bold to commit mischievous deeds, &c. The present meaning of the word is taken from the Chinese, among whom however, it is applied more specifically to one particular sect of learned men.

A physician of the name of Butler, residing at Hamburg has lately invented a new surgical instrument by means of which he can amputate a leg in one second, and which has the effect of benumbing the pain of the patient, by a simultaneous pressure which accompanies the operation.

Pride often miscalculates, and more often misconceives. The proud man places himself at a distance from other men; seen through that distance, others perhaps appear little to him; but he forgets that this very distance causes him to appear equally little to others.

To cure us of our immoderate love of gain, we should seriously consider how many gods there are that money will not purchase, and these the best; and how many evils there are that money will not remedy, and these the worst. An ancient philosopher of Athens, where the property of the wealthy was open to the confiscation of the informer, consoled himself for the loss of his fortune by the following reflection: I have lost my money, and with it my cares; for when I was rich, I was afraid of every poor man, but now that I am poor, every rich man is afraid of me.

OBITUARY.

Died in the City of New-York, in the 45th year of her age, Mrs. ANN MARIA WYNKOOP, wife of Augustus Wynkoop, Esq.; of that city, and daughter of the late Peter Silvester, Esq., of this village.

Feldom have we witnessed such heart-felt sorrow on the decease of an individual, as is manifested on this occasion, wherever the subject of this notice was known. By her unbounded benevolence, the native ease and unassuming dignity of her manners, she gained universal respect and esteem:—through an active but unostentatious charity, she secured the happiness of the poor. Although in the enjoyment of an abundance of earthly comforts, she did not neglect the "one thing needful."—She was a Christian.

The removal of this lamented friend, has occasioned "an aching void" in an extensive circle of surviving friends, and overwhelmed an increasing family with deep and poignant grief.
