Derby Sites Listed

There's still plenty of time to enter the Oswego County Trout Derby—with a grand prize of $10,000 in cash for the largest brown trout, and over $25,000 in cash and merchandise prizes in total.

The three-day event, held May 10, 11 and 12 on Lake Ontario and its tributaries is being sponsored by Miller Brewing Company and Fredon Sports Ltd., with the support of the Oswego County Legislature. The Greater Oswego Chamber of Commerce is once again coordinating the derby for the sponsors.

Mail entries are being accepted until May 6, and walk-in registrations will be taken until midnight on May 9, the eve of the derby. There is a $10 registration fee and entrants must file an official registration form.

Walk-in registration sites for this year's derby are: Port City Sports, Harry's Bait Shop, Salmon Shop and Oswego Gun Supply, in Oswego; the Fulton Chamber of Commerce and the Midway Bait Shop, in Fulton.

In Sandy Pond, the Greene Point Marina is accepting walk-in registrations, as is the Flat Rock Campsite, in Mexico. In Pulaski, anglers can register for the derby at Tony's Salmon Country Store and the Redwood Motel.

Also accepting walk-in entries are Hollow Grinder Sports in Rochester and Fredon Sports, Ltd., in Syracuse.

Mail and walk-in registrations will be accepted at the Greater Oswego Chamber of Commerce, 156 W. Second Street, Oswego, NY 13126.

All registrants will receive a numbered registration card, complete derby rules and regulations and a prize list.

This year, as in previous derbies, all children under 12 must be registered to participate in the derby, but there will be no charge for their entries, when accompanied by a registered adult. The parent or guardian must fill out a registration form for the child, however.

MOTION SICKNESS

Most avid recreational boaters and anglers will be forced to deal with a problem that many like to forget; that of motion sickness or sea sickness. Caused by an equilibrium problem associated with our balance mechanism in the inner ear, its symptoms are well known—a queezy stomach in mild cases to severe vomiting in the extreme. Boaters familiar with family or friends who are more susceptible to sickness will notice a progression from a victim "looking tired" and becoming quiet to the pale or off color complexion that often accompanies nausea.

For people who can't tolerate any amount of motion it may be wise to stay off the water. It may also help to be careful about food consumption before going out. Those foods which typically upset the stomach should be avoided. However, if symptoms are encountered while underway, the pilot or captain may want to steer for the nearest dock until either the water or stomach (or both) are calmed.

Motion sickness "antidotes" are on the market and can be bought over the counter. These may be effective for the boater who may have a tendency toward motion sickness or in the event of heavy wave action that can do in even the hardiest of seagoers.

The most familiar of all remedies in Dramamine, which has an effective time span of about four hours. Another product, Bonine, will last for almost 12 hours. Both work by "assisting", the body's inner ear. A major drawback can be drowsiness, so one might want to be concerned about this if operating a power boat.

Antiques & Home Arts

by Penny Woodard

Mirrors, or looking glasses as they were called in the old days, are the most cold, impersonal, and interesting objects in the house. It is said that all things change except the surface of a mirror, which sees all changes. When you think of the happiness, the misery, the terror, the change of fashion, and the miracles of science that have been reflected in their lidless, non-committal, ever-vigilant eyes without leaving one trace of their passing there, the mirror becomes not only interesting but awe-inspiring as well. You would think, for instance, a mirror that had reflected the face of Washington and heard him swear as he struggled with the intricacies of his satin cravat, would never be the same.

The beds he slept in never were. They at once became exclusive and proud. But not the mirror. With the indifference of fate itself it reflected any old face that came along two minutes later. However, we must get on with their history.

Looking-glasses are mentioned in inventories, so we have read, and heard, in this country as early as 1650, and probably they were quite wide spread, as they were not difficult to ship from London. We read in a Judge Sewall's famous list of things sent for in 1720 he includes "A True looking glass of black walnut, framed in the newest fashion, as good as can be bought for five or six pounds."

At that time mirrors were divided in two parts, the small portion at the top was divided from the lower, and larger portion with a strip of moulding. It was divided in two parts to avoid a tax. (It seems that the word Tax, has been around a long time.) The mirror in Judge Sewall's list, was probably made of black walnut. The frame most likely, was lacquered in golds and bright colors, as this was the fashion at that particular time. We learn that about 1750, a mirror, also in walnut was very popular. At this time, the mirror was in one piece, without beveling. This mirror is also rectangular in shape, and the decoration was applied in gilt to the top. The two mirrors I have just mentioned are usually found in museums or in a collectors home.

Next week I will continue with "The Mirror", a most needed piece of home furnishing.

Time to go, will be back soon.

Q. My mother started getting disability benefits at age 52 as a disabled widow. The benefits stopped three years later when she went back to work. She recently suffered another heart attack and the benefits have started again. My question is, will she be able to qualify for Medicare also?

A. Yes, since she was disabled again within seven years of the previous disability and had apparently met the 24-month period of receiving benefits required for Medicare eligibility.
