

EMINENT AMERICAN WOMEN.

MARY A. LIVERMORE.

Perhaps the two most distinguished women New England ever produced were Miss Charlotte Cushman, whose portrait was recently published, and Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, which is given above.

Mrs. Livermore is distinguished, and justly, as a scholar, author, orator, and a humanitarian; and if the field were open she would doubtless obtain eminence as a stateswoman. If a woman were to be selected as President of the United States, there are thousands who would intuitively turn to Mary A. Livermore.

And with all this, she is no less a wife and mother, and from a long and varied experience knows how to keep house and perform all the duties of housewife with rare ability.

She is a humanitarian in its broadest and most practical sense. Her life has been given to raising the fallen, helping the weak, befriending the friendless, and encouraging her fellow-men and fellow-women to a higher and nobler life.

During the anti-slavery agitation just preceding the war, her voice and pen were always on the side of the oppressed, and when the crisis came, few if any of the noble women of the land rendered more effective service in caring for the army and providing for the wants of the sick and wounded soldiers than Mrs. Livermore.

Possessed of remarkable executive ability, her sphere was that of an organizer, and her field was a broad one, extending all over the north-west, where her lot was then cast, while her influence was widely felt in the east. She may perhaps be designated the founder of the north-western Sanitary Commission, and the originator of the northwestern Sanitary Fair, held at Chicago, with such great success, and realizing half a million of dollars for the relief of suffering soldiers in camp and hospital.

Although her duties were too wide-spread to permit her to act as nurse in the hospitals, a position she would have gladly filled, she was frequently at the front of the army, even in range of the bullets of the enemy, inquiring into the needs of the soldiers. Through her instrumentality many hospital abuses were corrected, and it was due largely to her instrumentality and her co-worker, Mrs. Hoge, that the ravages of the scurvy were arrested in the camps in the valley of the Mississippi. Visiting the front, and finding the true situation, they hastened north, and appealed for immediate relief in the form of potatoes and onions, the panacea for that malady, and soon boat and car loads of those vegetables were moving southward.

SARANAC.

—Mr. Monroe Signor, son of J. W. Signor, is employed as a clerk Messrs. Bowen & Signor's store. He is a very worthy young man, and has been through a course of training and study in Eastman's Business College, at Yonkers, N. Y., after which he passed a year in the west. Young men of this class should be encouraged to make their homes in town.

—In the promotion of Mr. Frank Hooley we recognize elevation in the right direction, the elevation of merit, of good habits. He occupies the position lately held by Mr. Will Stoughton, head book-keeper in the Merchants' Bank, Chase & Co. Mr. Hooley was generally highly respected. He went to the war, was taken prisoner and confined in Salisbury prison with other comrades from this vicinity. He was finally released, but died from the effects of starvation and suffering from the hands of the rebels before he reached the lines. After this she married her present wife, Mrs. J. S. Brainerd. He has attended to the details of business without relaxation for a number of years.

—Mr. Levi Bates dropped dead at Redford, of supposed heart disease, on the 13th inst. There was a large attendance at the funeral of Mrs. Hannah Broadwell on Sunday. The funeral sermon was preached by Rev. J. S. Brainerd. He has attended to the details of business without relaxation for a number of years.

—Mr. Adams' house grows more home like. No place like home, even if you can pay rent. —Mert. didn't go to the party, but they say he broke the Elder's buggy.

—On your way to the country notice the improvements, picket-fence, two-story house, new barn, &c. Well done, especially to the two boys. —John Huse has a new fence that outshines them all. It consists of gas-pipe and wire webbing, and is neat, light, strong and handsome. Now, to the gate, through the gate, visitors, please tie your horses to the sidewalk.

—Isn't it about time to begin to throw coal ashes in the street? They are so nice to encourage a lazy horse. —Onions and fresh fish appear to find a ready market on our streets. Look out for turnips and cabbages next.

—Election was too warm weather. Dogs wouldn't fight. Politicians wouldn't treat. Schuyler Falls is a fraud. They claim to be lively over there, and our boys all came home sober. —BUSHWACKER.

DANNEMORA. —Mr. Peter St. German, a hunter living in the vicinity of Chazy Lake, put his dogs on the trail of a deer Tuesday and returned to Fordham's Point, where the deer soon arrived. Mr. St. German drew up and fired. The deer fell dead. On being taken out of the water he proved to be a large buck.

MESMERISM

Was not the power employed, which for the past three weeks, drew the large crowd of purchasers to our store, but the superior makes, excellent taste of selections, magnificent cut and fit, and remarkably low, yes, in fact ruinous, prices we are offering fine CLOTHING at this season.

Straws Show Which Way the Wind Blows. Just three weeks ago we had 567 of our Heavy Double-Breasted OVERCOATS ready for delivery at the Remarkably run of sizes from 35 to 42, inclusive. These will bear the same lot numbers as the former, viz:

Not a Catch-Word!

CUSTOMER—Good morning, Mr. Cane; I called to see one of your tremendous bargains; I don't suppose you have reduced prices very much, you advertise so big, but I need an Overcoat, so I might as well look at what you call cheap.

MR. CANE, JR.—We have some capital bargains. Here is the Overcoat we blow so much about. Lot 1030, the brown, size 38, just about fit you, try it on.

CUSTOMER—Why, how do you manage to make them at that price? 'Pon my word, they are very good goods; and no doubt worth more. I intended to put ten dollars into an Overcoat this winter, but this will answer the same purpose. I thought the prices you advertised were only catch-words, such as some stores use to draw customers in.

MR. CANE, JR.—Not at all. This bargain is only one of many that we have, and we are selling them all at prices never known before.

(The above conversation took place in our store last Saturday morning.)
