PLATTSBURGH SENTINEL.

FRIDAY MORNING, NOV. 16 1883.

NEVER OUT OF SIGHT.

There is a little saying
Which you'll find is always true,
My little boy, my little girl—
A saying that's for you;
'Tis this, my darling little one,
With eyes so clear and bright;
"No child in all this careless world
Is ever out of sight."

No matter whether field or glen,
Or city's crowded way,
Or pleasure's laugh, or labor's hum,
Entice your feet to stray,
Some one is always watching you,
And whether wrong or right,
No child in all this busy world
Is ever out of sight.

Some one is always watching you,
And marking all you do,
To see if all your childhood acts
Are honest, brave and true;
And watchers of the heavenly world,
God's angels, pure and white,
In joy or sorrow at your course
Are keeping out of sight.

Bear this in mind, my little one,
And let your aim be high,
To do whatever you may do
Beneath some seeing eye.
Remember this, my darling one,
And keep your good name bright,
No child who lives upon the earth
Is ever out of sight.

SCIENTIFIC MISCELLANY.

[PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THIS PAPER.]

—Water under a pressure of 1000 lbs. to the square inch may be seen at Virginia city. The fall is 1720 feet, and a jet the size of a knitting needle cannot be deflected by the hand as it tears the flesh from the bones. When directed against a piece of ¼ inch wrought iron it cut its way through in half an hour.

—Real Egyptian ebony furniture is made of beechwood boiled in nitrate of iron, and washed with extract of logwood. New York dealers in antiques are able to supply it in unlimited quantities, although the British Museum has been unable to obtain more than six chairs.

—One bushel of sweet corn will make twelve pounds when evaporated, worth from fifteen to twenty-five cents per pound. Care must be taken that the corn is not too old as such becomes tough and dry after evaporation.

—The authorities claim that a belt to be most serviceable should be a trifle wider than the pulley.

—Ocean cables do not use the ordinary telegraphic instruments for recording messages, as the electrical tension is not sufficiently strong. The first plan was to cause a small mirror to swing from side to side, throwing flashes of light responsive to the breaks in the current. The improved system substitutes a fine lin of ink running from a syphon upon a strip of paper. The syphon swings right or left according to the impulse sent from the other extremity of the cable, and the irregular serrated line is easily translated.

—The latest development in artillery is a steel cannon having a shell of no more than a half-inch thickness, reinforced with six inches or so of silk thread. Silk is as strong as steel.

—Steel nails are gaining in popularity. Hard wood workers use them exclusively, and boxmakers prefer them on account of the facility with which they may be drawn and used a second time.

—The village of La Beau, Dakota, when it was three weeks old contained six general stores, one dry goods store, one hardware store, five saloons, one meat market, three lumber yards, one bank, one newspaper office, one telegraph office, a post office (with 280 calls and 80 lock boxes of the Yale pattern in a building 20x30, two stories high, two hotels, and other buildings. There were also in process of construction a bank, a 50 room hotel, a hardware store, a dry goods store 30x80, and a Presbyterian church.

—A new pass through the Andes has been discovered. By this route it is only seventy miles from ocean to ocean. The grade is said to be feasible for a railroad. It lies between the Argentine Republic and Chili, from the gulf of San Matras to the head of the gulf near Chiloe Island.

—Italy and other orange and lemon growing countries over the seas import their boxes in the "knock down" condition from the United States. One factory in Maine turns out 3,000 per day.

—A factory in Indianapolis makes wooden dishes, grocer's butter plates, etc., at the rate of 200,000 per day.

—Australia boasts of the tallest trees in the world, one of which measures 430 feet from the ground.

—A man recently crossed the English Channel from Dover to Calais on a floating tricycle, a three wheel machine made buoyant and having paddles on the larger wheels. He occupied from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. in the passage.

—A mixture composed of wood, coal tar, linseed oil, etc., has been invented in St. Petersburgh, which is reported to be a substitute for rubber.

—There are 8,379¼ miles of railroad in Mexico, including horse cars and narrow guages.

—Physicians report that ginger ales are very injurious to the lining of the stomach.

—A good mucilage for labels on glass is glue 5 parts, pure sugar 9, gum arabic 3, water 20, applied lukewarm.

—The stationary rope towing company on the river Rhine have demonstrated that on swift streams towing may be greatly cheapened by the use of the stationary rope.

—Soap bubbles capable of being blown to two feet in diameter and preserved for 48 hours may be made from Oleate of soda and gylcerine.

—The census tables report that in New Hampshire there is one man out of every 80 who has reached the age of 80. Of females the average is 1 to 58. In New York the average is 1 to 161. In Texas 1 to 497. In Illinois 1 to 263, while in Colorado 1150 younger men combine to crowd the octegenarian to the wall.

—The "grip" on the cable of the Brooklyn bridge cars is composed of two wheels which revolve at first pressure and gradually stop as the car starts.

—Advocates of a meat diet claim that three quarters of a pound per diem is a fair quantity for a person of average size, weight and activity.

A Merchant's Story.

A member of a large mercantile firm recently gave a portion of his early experience in this wise.

I was seventeen years old when I left the country store I had tended for three years, and came to Boston in search of a place. Anxious, of course, to appear to the best advantage, I spent an unusual amount of time and solicitude upon my toilet, and when it was completed, I surveyed my reflection in the glass with no little satisfaction, glancing lastly and most approvingly upon a seal ring which embellished my little finger, and my cane, a very fine affair, which I purchased with direct reference to this occasion. My first day's experience was not encouraging; I traversed street after street—up on one side and down the other—without success. I fancied, towards the last, the clerks knew my business the moment I entered the door, and they winked ill-naturedly at my discomfiture as I passed out. But nature endowed me with a good degree of persistency, and the next day I started again. Towards noon I entered a store where an elderly gentleman stood talking with a lady by the door. I waited till the visitor had left, and then stated my errand. "No, sir," was the answer, given in a peculiarly crisp and decided manner. Possibly I looked the discouragement I began to feel; for he added, in a kindlier tone, "Are you good at taking a hint?" "I don't know," answered I, while my face flushed painfully. "What I wish to say is this," said he, smiling at my embarrassment; "If I were in want of a clerk, I would not engage a young man who came seeking employment with a flashy ring on his finger and swinging a fancy cane." For a moment, mortified vanity struggled against common sense, but sense got the victory, and I replied—with rather a shaky voice, I am afraid—"I am very much obliged to you," and then beat a hasty retreat. As soon as I got out of sight I slipped the ring into my pocket, and walking rapidly to the Worcester depot, I left the cane in charge of the baggage-master "until called for." It is there now, for aught I know. At any rate, I never called for it. That afternoon I obtained a situation with the firm of which I am now a partner. How much my unfortunate finery had injured my prospects the previous day I shall never know, but I never think of the old gentleman and his plain dealing without feeling, as I told him at the time, very much obliged to him.

Rebellion in the Harems.

A Constantinople letter says: The government is poor, it is harrassed with many weighty questions besides the means of defense against cholera. Yet it has found time to enter upon a crusade against the fair sex, and it finds the ladies harder to deal with than the czar himself. During the present month, when all Moslems observe the fast of Romazan, those who can afford to lie abed through the heat of the day. By night, however, the city is astir. From 10 o'clock until midnight all the Turkish ladies who can find carriages take their drive through the most fashionable squares. The jam in such places is tremendous. One night the chief of police was promenading in search of evils to be cured, and he observed these great lines of carriages full of ladies passing along under the eyes of the young men of the city standing on either side of the roadway. And then he saw, to his horror, ladies lean forward and smile at the young men, and even wave handkerchiefs from carriage windows. He saw handkerchiefs dropped from the carriages, by accident, and he was morally certain that the young men who politely handed them back to their owners delayed long enough to squeeze the fair hands that received them. All these things were gall and wormwood to the old gentleman. The next day an order was posted through the city prohibiting ladies from driving after nightfall. This of course raised a storm which is not yet appeased. It has drawn out the startling and treasonable claim from some of the ladies that they have equal rights and privileges with the men. It is of course to be expected that the Turkish ladies will win in this matter, in spite of police and the fact that Turkish dictionaries do not admit such a word as flirtation.

Keeping Hotel in Jerusalem.

Philadelphia Record: Jonathan S. Brinton left this state for Iowa many years ago and accumulated considerable property. In 1875 he became convinced that he was inspired by God to open an inn or tavern near Jerusalem, to prepare for the restoration of the holy city, and, although remonstrated with by his friends and by his family he determined to make the journey to Palestine and do as he had been directed. He first divided his property equally between himself and wife, and sailed for the holy city. Upon arriving there he purchased several acres of land near the city, and erected a hotel. Strange to relate, the scheme proved a great financial success, and the old gentleman is now making a fortune from his inn. Recently he sent over for his family, and they are now with him and highly delighted with their new home and golden prospects. Hundreds of Englishmen and Americans stop at the hotel, and it has become one of the institutions of Jerusalem.

What a Soldier told me.

General Sheridan was more apt to be seen in a blouse coat, slouch hat, and with one or both pant legs in his boot, than in a full dress uniform.

One time when on a march in the Shenandoah valley, General Sheridan, dressed as above described, was riding along out of line, in a careless, straggling way, when a young lieutenant rode briskly up and punching him in the side with a sword, told him to 'get into line and keep there.'

That evening the lieutenant was called to the general's headquarters, and when he learned it was General Sheridan that he had so imperiously, but innocently ordered into line he began to humbly apologize in the most gentlemanly manner.

'You do not need to apologize,' said the general kindly, 'for you did nothing but your duty.'

Doubtless this incident made the lieutenant very wary in the future regarding whom he ordered into line, and possibly the general was more careful of his toilet and his manner of riding his horse.

A Virtuous Man.

Ezra Ripley, the well-known Puritan minister at Concord, a sketch of whose life, by Ralph Waldo Emerson, is published in the Atlantic, once attended the funeral of a father of a family, and addressed each member separately. "Sir, I condole with you." "Madame, I condole with you." And turning to the eldest son, who was supposed to be intemperate, "Sir, I knew your great grandfather. When I came to this town your great grandfather was a substantial farmer in this very place, a member of the church, and an excellent citizen. Your grandfather followed him and was a virtuous man. Now your father is to be carried to his grave, full of labors and virtues. There is none of that large family left but you, and it rests with you to bear up the good name and usefulness of your ancestors. If you fail, Ichabod, the glory is departed. Let us pray."

—David Adams of White Creek, Washington county, died of starvation on Friday. He leaves an estate valued at $50,000. It is reported that his wife also died of starvation about ten years ago. A small piece of pork and one potatoe was the day's rations dealt out to her during her helpless condition.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,
MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."
159 West 125th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.
