THIS MORNING'S TOPICS.

Partly cloudy weather, frequent light rain or snow, warm southerly veering to colder westerly winds, followed by rising barometer. The temperature will remain above freezing in the canal region. The storm centre in the lower lake region will move with great energy northeastward. Cautionary signals at Oswego, Rochester, Buffalo and Erie.

HELLER, the most wonderful of magicians, is dead. The most wonderful magic could not save him.

Rumor has it that Nephew PELTON will spend the winter in Canada to avoid being summoned before the POTTER committee.

Secretary MCCRARY, of the War Department, says he is not mixed up in the dispute about the transfer of the Indian Bureau, though he has an opinion. MCCRARY is suspected of cherishing Presidential aspirations, and his caution is remarkable.

One of the strongest imaginable cases in favor of repudiating certain county bonds in Kansas has just been tried in the United States Court, and the decision sustains the bonds. The fact that they were fraudulently procured did not destroy them. Communities which are misguided enough to contest the payment of bonds lawfully, even if not equitably issued, will learn what the uniform ruling of the courts is on the subject in the costliest way.

Congressman CHARLES FOSTER, who is in Washington, gives his opinion that though a very great outcry will be made against the National banks in Congress it will not amount to anything. "It will only be a windy fight. The anti-National Bank element is not strong enough to accomplish anything materially to the disadvantage of the banks." As Mr FOSTER is an Ohio man, his opinion on that subject is perhaps as good as anybody's.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company and the United Pipe Lines have filed with the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania at Pittsburgh answers to the suits begun against them in the name of the Commonwealth. The complaints charge them with violation of their charters by discriminating against the oil producers in their charges for carrying oil, and conspiracy to control the business. The defendants put in a general denial. How soon the suits will come to trial is not stated.

Ex-Postmaster General JEWELL now claims to have sixty-nine members of the Connecticut Legislature pledged to vote for him for Senator. It requires eighty to nominate, and JEWELL's claims are said to be much too large, though he has the Government patronage of the State to work for him. General HAWLEY's chances appear to be not easily calculated. He is letting things take their course. Two other candidates, HOAR and PLATT, are hard at work and claim that the prize lies between them.

Secretary SCHURZ's plan of Indian management is given in his annual report, a synopsis of which is printed this morning. It claims that the character of the Indian service has been much improved, and expresses the belief if the system now in operation can be continued efficiently the best results may be expected. The only trouble is likely to be in keeping the Indians on their reservations and protecting them from the whites, which will of course require the services of the Army though no reference is made to that branch of the service.

Superintendent PILSBURY has dismissed Warden WELLES of Auburn prison, who is generally understood to have performed his duties efficiently and appointed WM. J. MOSES in his place. The reason assigned is that WELLES did not make the prison pay expenses and it is expected that MOSES will. It is possible that this is the true reason, but the fact that MOSES is a life-long Democratic politician and ardent supporter of TILDEN gives ground for the suspicion that the change is purely political. Mr. TILDEN is well known to have great influence over PILSBURY and it looks as if he was using it.

The expectation that Mr TILDEN would give up his Presidential aspirations on account of the cipher despatch exposures appears to be ill-founded. A despatch from Washington says it is well known there among prominent Democratic politicians that Mr TILDEN is actively engaged in mapping out a plan of campaign which will ensure him the Democratic nomination at the next National Convention. He has emissaries at work in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, Tennessee, Missouri, Kentucky, Illinois, Ohio and some of the smaller States. In his instructions to these parties, he confidently states that as far as New-York is concerned he and his friends will be able to hold that vote against the influence of Tammany. The grounds upon which his friends renew their claim are that he was defrauded out of the election. MONTGOMERY BLAIR's recent letter defending TILDEN and denouncing HEWITT, THURMAN, BAYARD and others as responsible for the electoral commission which deprived TILDEN of the Presidency is said to be part of the programme. These tactics do not precisely suit some of the leaders, and it is believed they will oppose no obstacles to a thorough investigation of TILDEN's crookedness when Congress meets.

Total, $3,000,000. Principal and interest payable at the Treasury February 27th, interest ceases that day.

TREASURER'S REPORT

The annual report of United States Treasurer Gilfillan shows the total reduction of debt and currency September 30th to be $317,424,964. Coin resources have increased to $833,007,574. The retirement of legal tenders during the fiscal year was $13,083,016.

BUYING SILVER.

Between 30,000 and 40,000 ounces of silver were purchased at the Treasury to-day at a fraction below London quotation.

He says there is a demand for silver dollars in many portions of the country, where from the locality it is not possible they are desired for any other purpose than for circulation.

SECRETARY SCHURZ'S ANNUAL REPORT

The Secretary of the Interior's annual report recapitulates the plan of the Indian policy sketched last year. The following are the principal points:

First—The permanent location of the Indians on a smaller number of reservations containing a fair proportion of arable and pasture lands.

Second—Encouragement to agricultural and pastoral pursuits by furnishing agricultural implements and domestic animals and proper instructions by practical farmers.

Third—The gradual allotment of small tracts of land to the heads of families to be held in severalty under proper restrictions.

Fourth—The discouragement of hunting, proper restrictions as to the possession of arms and ammunitions by Indians and the gradual exchange of posses for cattle.

Fifth—The extension of the laws of the United States over the Indian reservations to be enforced by the proper tribunals and organization of Indian police.

Sixth—The labor of white men on the Indian reservations as much as possible to be dispensed with and proper discrimination to be made in the distribution of supplies and annuity goods and the granting of favors between Indians who work and those who live as idle vagabonds.

Seventh—The establishment of schools for the instruction of Indian children in the English language, elementary branches of knowledge, and especially in practical work.

Eighth—Sufficient provision for the wants of Indians until they grow self-supporting.

The Secretary believes the execution of this plan, if properly aided by Congress and not interfered with by the white population of the Western States and Territories, would in time bring forth satisfactory results. Considerable progress has already been made in its execution as far as it depends on the action of the Interior Department. The Secretary states that the character of the Indian service has been raised in point of integrity and efficiency, although he is far from pretending that the present condition of Indian affairs is what it ought to be. The Secretary says if the recurrence of trouble and disturbance is to be avoided, the appropriations by Congress for the support of Indians who are not self-supporting must be liberal enough to be sufficient for that purpose, and they must be made early enough in the year to render the purchase and delivery of new supplies possible before the old supplies are exhausted. The Indian service should have at its disposal a sufficient fund to be used with proper account ability and discretion in an unforeseen emergency. The citizens of the Western States and Territories must be made to understand that if the Indians are to cease to be troublesome paupers and vagabonds and are to become orderly and self-supporting they must have lands in fee agriculture and pasture, that on such lands they must be permitted to reign and establish permanent homes, and that such a result cannot be obtained if the white people insist upon taking from them by force or trickery every acre that is good for anything. Whatever may be accomplished by the employment of force, it is certain that only as the Indians progress in the way of civilization will they cease to be a troublesome and disturbing element.

The Secretary refers to the peaceful conduct of the Sioux Indians under Red Cloud and Spotted Tail, and admits, regarding the Bannock outbreak, that those Indians were insufficiently supplied with food, which, however, was owing to the appropriation being utterly inadequate to their wants. The money available for feeding them amounted to less than four and one-half cents a head per day, while they were cooped up on a reservation and not allowed to hunt.

The outbreak of Northern Cheyennes was not caused by hunger nor by neglect on the part of the Government officials, but by the mischievous spirit of the bad Indians and their determination to return northward to their old hunting grounds.

Considerable space is devoted to the subject of timber lands, and the Secretary's action in preventing depredations is defended.

The Secretary renews his former earnest recommendations looking to the preservation of the public timber lands. The report contains a large amount of statistical matter showing the business condition of the various railroads which received land or money subsidies from the Government. The practical utility of the new law creating the Bureau of Railroad Accounts is declared already proven. The report also contains useful recommendations regarding medical examinations of pensioners, concerning the Patent Office and census, and recommends a reconstruction of the interior building at a cost of $973,937.

THE CHICAGO CUSTOM-HOUSE INDICTMENTS.

The Deputy Marshal of the Northern Illinois District arrived here to-day with a copy of an indictment found by the United States Court at Chicago charging J. G. Hill, Supervising Architect of the Treasury, and A. G. Mills, contractor, and others, with conspiracy to defraud the Government. He had also warrants for the arrest of Hill and Mills. Chief Justice Carter, issued bench warrants and the accused parties were brought into court. Bail was fixed in Chicago at $5,000 each, and the same was fixed here, for their appearance December 16th, which was given.

A NEGRO DESPERADO.

PORT GIBSON, Miss., Nov. 27.—Dr. Buck, Sheriff of Claiborne County, with his deputies, before daylight this morning, attempted to arrest Harrison Page, a negro desperado who assassinated the chancery clerk of this county two years ago. One of the deputies, Robert Lum, was shot dead and the Sheriff fatally shot. Thos. Harwood, another deputy, was knocked into an old cistern and left for dead. He has since revived, and was not seriously hurt. The posse left town immediately. Charlie Wellman, one of the posse, while riding near Page's house, was severely wounded. The assassin escaped. AUBURN PRISON MANAGEMENT.

SYRACUSE, Nov. 27.—The change of warden and agent of the State prison at Auburn takes place December 1st. The reason assigned for the change is that the prison is not self-sustaining and the new appointee is expected to make it so. Welles resigned when allowed that course instead of removal.

FRAUDULENT BONDS VALIDATED.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 27.—The Supreme Court of the State has decided the long pending case to test the validity of the organization of Harper County, in the name of which a large number of fraudulent bonds were raised a few years ago and put on the markets of St. Louis and New-York. There were not twenty persons in the county at the time of organization, and the issuing and selling of bonds was the scheme of three or four persons to enrich themselves. There had been no election in the county for five years, but the court says as the Legislature admitted a member from the county under the bill authorizing the issue of bonds the organization is valid, although it was no doubt a great swindle and effected solely for dishonest purposes.

The Captain Unable to Talk—Statement of a British Officer on Board—The Disaster Needless—Lists of the Saved.

ROTTERDAM, Nov. 27.—It is impossible to converse with Captain Schwenren, who is under medical treatment, his nervous system being so strongly affected that he has received nobody. The Captain of the "City of Amsterdam" gives the following information. It was a very dark night. When the "Pommerania" was off Falkestone Captain Schwenren left the bridge for a moment. When he felt the shock he immediately returned to the bridge—but cannot well recollect subsequent events. The "City of Amsterdam" was passing at the time, hailed cries for help, but could see nothing. Nevertheless she lowered her life-boats, which found Captain Schwenren floating on a piece of wood. It was then about 12.45 o'clock. Schwenren's watch stopped at 12.15.

PASSENGERS SAVED.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—A telegram from London contains the following additional names of the "Pommerania's" passengers saved: Louis Schurr, Wm. Iesse, Henry Schmidt, New York; Jno. Rackmann. — Blight, H. Hinkelmann, Hoboken, N. J.; H. Strodt, John Hank, Fred. Zuehe, H. Stengel, R. Schuetzler, Henry Schmidt, Arnold Prink, Wilh. Heggemann, Martin Appel, New York; Theo. Harder, Greenpoint, L. I.; Jurgen Rannick, John Johnson, Jamestown, N. Y.; George Kraus, Mich. Kraus, Fred. Peterson, Williamsburg, N. Y.; J. Olsen, Hemsong Kvanmsen, Jas. Lockner, Carl Kallmeier, Wm. Reimann, Ferd. CORPSES ARRIVE.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—One female and two male corpses from the wreck of the "Pommerania" have been landed at Hastings. One of the ladies is apparently that of an officer of the steamer.

STATEMENT OF A PASSENGER.

Thomas Blight, a certificated officer of the Bag ish Mercantile Marine who embarked on the Pommerania at Plymouth was under examination this morning by the receiver of wrecks and has since deposed at Board of Trade he cause of the nature of his evidence. He says the Pommerania was going at a half to three-quarter speed. There was a good look out and lights were burning and it was not foggy. He heard no whistle or fog horn. Before the steamer sank there was time to save every life if order had been maintained. He was beside the captain when the latter put on his life-belt. He heard no orders given. It was too late for orders. One of the officers told him the doors of the watertight bulkheads were all open. There was no more sea than in the Thames. All could have been saved if the sailors had not rushed to the boats. The "Pommerania's" masts will be taken out to-morrow. It is not expected that the vessel will ever be floated.

The latest figures show 94 of the crew saved out of 111 and 72 passengers out of 104.

THE UNIVERSAL BOY.

Three Chapters in His Life.

From the Cincinnati Saturday Night.

CHAPTER I.—"IT'S A BOY."

His advent is heralded in the brief but strong sentence just quoted. No matter what hopes have been indulged concerning girl babies, what list of names sounded over to catch the most musical and euphonious ones, there is something in the pithy announcement, "It's a boy," which dispels all fanciful dreams and sets everybody on a prose basis. His very voice, as it utters a defiant war-whoop to the grand army of humanity, tells the story to experienced years. The visions of a dainty girl darling very soon vanish before this positive piece of prose, who kicks his sturdy heels through the delicate pink socks intended for his sister, and who grows red as a turkey cock's head at Thanksgiving time when he is expected to show off to a good advantage before callers. He persists in an abnormal development of nose and a puffiness about the eyes, along with several other little tricks known only to interested parties. Parents and nurses become reconciled and accept him on trust, seeing no other alternative. He emerges from his puffy and rosy obstinacy to a roly poly, wide-awake thing of beauty, which is a joy fully one-half of the time. There is a process from infancy to little boyhood, a sweet time, when the man-child is half baby, half angel. In the clear depths of his innocent eyes is a world of trust and hope and love. His white brow is fair as a freshly opened lily, and his lips as sweet as buds of roses. He is most witching at this age, for the peculiarities which mark the enfant terrible are undeveloped. He is an armful of love and beauty and promise and dread and hope. Love him while yet there is no guile on the tender lips; no sin in the unwritten soul, no touch of the world's brush upon God's finished work.

CHAPTER II.—"GIT UP, OLD HORSEY."

Mercy what a noise! Look at that chair, with a string tied on the arms and made fast to the writing desk and flower-stand, all to be driven tandem by that young imp in kilt skirt and fancy hat and shoes. Who upset that work-basket? and, good gracious! what work has been made with my wool and thread! There's the last Graphic torn to scraps and stuffed in the cupboard with my screw-driver, that I lost a week ago. What is he doing with the cat? and, dear me! if he hasn't thrown grandma's spectacles into the grate!"

"Where's Harry? Run to the kitchen and see. All the eggs are broken in the basket of folded clothes, and the milk for pudding has been fed to the cat and dog. Bridget Lannigan is in a towering rage and says "Phat's the use of salavin to kape clane wud such a young divil forninst ye?" Miss Frigidity Pursebunch calls, and is horrified by being requested to "be a horse and let Harry ride straddle to Boston." She is questioned, also, on many delicate points, and asked how many little boys she has and whether she has seen his blue monkey that performs on a yellow stick, and his "rooster that crows if you just blow in behind." He gets very close to her and asks what that white stuff on her face is, and what makes her wear such a funny little hat.

A few years of this juvenile terror and then appears another stage of the boy. He gets a fever only appeased by marbles. It is useless to head off this phase if it is shut off in one direction it breaks out more violently in some other. It goes through a period of ten or seven years and costs much in anxiety, broken window panes and mortified pride. He is afflicted with rats, pigeons and other boyish complaints, which are harmless, but annoying. He brings in his dirty steel-traps to amuse his sick sister, who grows worse under it, and in his solicitude he straps his legs fast to six feet of rails and stoops to enter the door of her room, to the horror and dismay of his mother. He brings little notes home from school, which he tries to explain in a favorable light but fails to convince his parents that it was "only because Bill Wilson dropped his date on Abe Henness's toes and made me laugh." He carves his awkward initials on old Mrs. Williams's cellar door, and she threatens him arrest. He goes to see "Humpty Dumpty," and comes home and throws real brickbats at his aunt, and flirts it so that with a battering blow from his head in the region of the diaphragm when she is bringing in the coal. He makes life a burden, and home a snare and a delusion. He tears the comforters in more ways than one, and slits the pillow cases to match them. Gradually he leaves off his hurly-burly life and imperceptibly glides into

CHAPTER III.—"WHERE'S MY BEST TIE?"

"Where is the blacking brush? I am going to a little surprise and won't be home till eleven. Is my pencil shirt done up nice? I wish you'd make my collars stiffer. I don't think some one for throwing my coat down and getting it wrinkled all up. How do you like this hat? Think it looks better than my soft one?" You will find the pigeon houses all deserted about this period, and not a rat-trap numbers the back yard. The wood-shed theatricals are all ended, the stilts are put away, the kites forgotten, window glass is in perfect safety. The dust has filled up the rude mortals in Mrs. William's cellar door, and there is an unwonted quiet all around the house. Chairs stay in their places, and pantaloons will no longer bear cutting over for the boy. He gets them now out of new stuff, and mothers cut and make unduly him. He is not in the way now, and there is a heavy pain in mother's heart as she thinks that he will never need her much any more. The tenderest eyes have a deeper meaning in them now. They have taken into their depths the perfection of a face younger than mothers and life begins to look real to them.

The world is full of homes where these pictures will be recognized and hung up as family portraits—homes where there are no sounds of young voices now. They grow away into the great world so soon and we put away the nameless feeling of desolation as we do the cast-off toys of their childhood, and when the evening of life approaches the heart goes back along the track of time and is once more with the children in the dear long ago.
