Side Street Newsbeat
by Bill McLaughlin

The Olympic torch, said one of the smiling guardians of the torch relay, was passed onto a student of the Indian Village Academy Monday afternoon by blue-ribbon officials of Lake Placid Electric Power Development Corp.

This was to be the 350th relay in the relay's 30,000-mile course around the United States. It was a fitting way to open the Lake Placid Electric Co-op's 30th anniversary celebration.

The torch relay's birthplace was the upper hand in the torch relay, as it was the first torch to be lit in the torch relay. The torch was carried by a student of Lake Placid High School, who was the torch's first bearer.

The torch was seen as a symbol of the unity of the nations and the peoples of the world. It was a symbol of the Olympic spirit and the Olympic Movement. The torch was carried by a student of Lake Placid High School, who was the torch's first bearer.

The torch relay was a way to promote the Olympic spirit and the Olympic Movement. The torch was carried by a student of Lake Placid High School, who was the torch's first bearer.

The torch relay was a way to promote the Olympic spirit and the Olympic Movement. The torch was carried by a student of Lake Placid High School, who was the torch's first bearer.

The torch relay was a way to promote the Olympic spirit and the Olympic Movement. The torch was carried by a student of Lake Placid High School, who was the torch's first bearer.