Cliff Donaldson named as co-chair of state Association of Counties Legislative Committee

ALBANY — New York State Association of Counties Executive Director Cliff Donaldson has been appointed the head of the group's Legislative Council, which represents more than 1,000 counties across the state.

NYSCA President Bill Biegel, a former New York state senator, said that Donaldson brings to the role a wealth of experience in government and in addition to his current position as county manager for Albany County, he also serves as the board chairman of the New York Association of County Managers.

Donaldson was elected to the Franklin County Legislature in 1981 and served until 1984, resigning to chair the county in 1993 and 1994.

The newly appointed NYSCA Legislative Director, a registered lobbyist and former state senator, also holds a bachelor's degree in public administration from the College of the City of New York, a master's degree in public administration and policy from the University of Florida, and a master's degree in public administration and policy from the University of Florida.

The NYSCA is the state association for county executives and county officials, representing more than 1,000 counties in New York.
