WildFest adds nicely to July 4 festivities

There are always plenty of reasons to get excited about the Fourth of July: patriotic picnics, anticipation of the grand finale of fireworks, and the eighth annual WildFest at the Adirondack Museum.

Last summer, after years in the making, the museum opened on July 4 to a tremendous crowd that included Sen. George Pataki, U.S. Sen. Hillary Clinton, U.S. Rep. John McHugh and musicians Richie Havens and Martin Short. Werego this WildFest as it was dubbed, was met with vast crowds, opening the door to a new era of creative expression in our country.

The music, set to start at 10 a.m., is only one of the many attractions. Birds are the theme this year, so the Zucchini Brothers will bring their antics to the stage.

As you can imagine, we're already looking forward to the next one. We didn't figure the museum would be the location for the first WildFest (they're not all that entertaining anyway), but we're happy with it. We're excited for the inaugural event. We're looking forward to seeing what's to come.

We recommend it.

Wildfest

Letter to the Editor

Editor's note: Each week, we publish excerpts from the community's opponents and supporters of lowering the drinking age.

This poll is not scientific, and its results represent only the opinions of those who contacted us. These excerpts are unedited, printed as they appear online.

Editor's note: Each week, we publish excerpts from the community's opponents and supporters of lowering the drinking age.

This poll is not scientific, and its results represent only the opinions of those who contacted us. These excerpts are unedited, printed as they appear online.

The federal government has no business setting speed limits or road check stops. AND continue to support MADD and raising the drinking age should be caused over and over again. I believe kids should be able to drink at 21 because they are able to be responsible.

I don't like young people having bush parties and then driving on the roads, AND continue to support MADD and raising the drinking age should be caused over and over again. I believe kids should be able to drink at 21 because they are able to be responsible.

I was talking about keeping young people safe and keeping our streets safe. It has everything to do with voting and joining the military. It has everything to do with it.

I was talking about keeping young people safe and keeping our streets safe. It has everything to do with voting and joining the military. It has everything to do with it.

I was talking about keeping young people safe and keeping our streets safe. It has everything to do with voting and joining the military. It has everything to do with it.

I was talking about keeping young people safe and keeping our streets safe. It has everything to do with voting and joining the military. It has everything to do with it.

I was talking about keeping young people safe and keeping our streets safe. It has everything to do with voting and joining the military. It has everything to do with it.