Useful and Interesting.
Dr. A. G. Hall's lately improved self-adjusting, patent HINGE TRUSS.

THE superior utility of this Truss consists in its simple mode of application, as well as the happy effect of its approximating qualities of the rupture, which, in its form and operation, differs from all others; inasmuch as it acts on the principle of a double hinge, presenting its flat border on the outer walls of the rupture, which, by its own power of adjustment, and approximating qualities of the rupture, pad, supereminently calculated not only to keep the rupture in its place without harm to the adjacent parts; but also calculated to, and has, in many instances, effected a perfect cure, in persons from 50 to 70 years of age. And even when a cure is hopeless, it will, by approximating those parts on which the Truss pad is applied, actually lessen the dimensions of the rupture opening, instead of enlarging it; as is the great fault with the convex or round formed pads, inordinately, though erroneously, designed to press into its opening.

Mode of application.—In some cases of rupture a difference of adaptation, as to form, size, and degree of pressure is necessary. A neglect of these absolute requisites is the only cause of failure in this instrument, when any means of relief are practicable. A careful observance of this, and attention to the directions on the pad for applying the Truss, are particularly requested.
In evidence of the superiority of this Truss, there are deposited, at the several places of sale, certificates, more than verifying all the pretensions made of its excellence. Among the number is a certificate of the Medical Society of the State of New-York. Also from many of the most respectable medical institutions, as well as eminent medical practitioners, in this and other states.
Certificate from Nathan Smith, M. D. C. S. M. S. Lord, Professor of the Theory and Practice of Physick, Surgery, and Obstetrics, Yale College.

This may certify, that I have examined Dr. A. G. Hall's self-adjusting Patent Hinge Truss, and have applied it in several cases of Hernia. From my knowledge of the principle upon which it acts, and from its effects, I do not hesitate to give it a decided preference to any thing of the kind I have ever seen.
NATHAN SMITH,
Prof. of Physick and Surg. Yale Col.
Copy of a letter from Samuel R. Marshall, Hospital Surgeon, United States Navy, New-York, to F. Le Baron, Esq. Apothecary General, United States Army.
Dear Sir—This will be handed to you by Dr. Hall, the inventor of a Truss, which promises to be extremely useful in every species of Hernia. It is, in my opinion, so far superior to all the Trusses hitherto used, that I have determined to make use of them in all the United States Ships, which may be fitted out at this port. As a production of American ingenuity, it is entitled to a fair trial; and I am persuaded you will take pleasure in affording it that justice, by employing it in the Army. With great respect and esteem, I am, dear Sir, truly your obedient servant,
SAMUEL R. MARSHALL.

A JUST STANDARD FOR PRONOUNCING THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE, Containing
The Rudiments of the English Language, Arranged in Catechetical Order;
An organization of the Alphabet; an easy scheme of Spelling and Pronunciation intermixed with Easy Reading Lessons; to which are added, some Useful Tables, with the names of cities, counties, towns, rivers, lakes, &c. in the United States; and a List of the Proper Names contained in the New Testament, and pronounced according to the best authorities. Designed to teach the orthography and orthoepy of J. Walker. By LYMAN COBB.
Examine thoroughly and impartially, then judge.
Revised Edition.

This edition has been thoroughly and carefully revised, corrected and enlarged. It has been carefully compared with the various editions of Walker's Dictionary, and strictly conformed, in spelling and pronunciation, to the much approved principles of Walker.—It contains many useful tables and spelling lessons, and much elementary information, not to be found in any other spelling book, English or American. The publishers, therefore, have confidence in announcing it as the most USEFUL and CORRECT work of its class now extant; and they invite Teachers, Inspectors, and Trustees of schools, and gentlemen of science and experience, generally, to a strict and critical examination of its pages.

The following recommendatory letter is from the Secretary of State and Acting Superintendent of Common Schools, who had an opportunity of examining, leisurely and critically, the revised sheets of the present edition:—
Albany, July 7, 1825.

The Revised Edition of L. Cobb's Just Standard for Pronouncing the English Language, having been put into my hands for examination, I have given it an attentive perusal, and am decidedly of opinion that it is a work of great merit. It contains about two hundred words, used by correct writers, and which are not to be found in Walker's Dictionary: These are distinguished by an asterisk.—The author has also increased the number of words, which, though pronounced alike, have different significations; and he has made several other valuable improvements in his book.—I consider it an excellent school book,—and as such I recommend it.
