In celebration of Youth in Art Month, Connor Middle School artists are participating in art shows and displays. Middle School students currently have work on display at M & T Bank at the Grand Island Plaza. The display features a wide variety of work by sixth, seventh and eighth grade art students. On display are blackprints, paintings, drawings, collage and pictures of students at work. The work will be on display for the week of March 10, and the public is invited to stop by and admire the students' best efforts and creative accomplishments.

In addition, six Middle School artists have been selected to participate in the annual NYS Art Teachers Association Art Show, "Drawing Meaning," which opens this week in the education wing at the Albright-Knox Art Gallery. Those artists representing Connor Middle School are: Steve Ackendorf, Casey Caney, Jamie Di Sarno, Jessica Davis, Mark Drossos and Nicole Kalisz, all eighth graders.
