end thought, though, the Soviets and their allies delegates in the UN would vote it.

After all is said, the Model UN and other "Y"-sponsored programs are highly commendable because they provide opportunities for all high school students opportunities to engage in constructive activities and activities of the minds. It's development that foster abilities, power of reasoning, to learn how to speak and that's no mean endeavor. Learn by exposure to words, how to think logically and so on and so forth. All such mental exercise is beneficial and students feel that improving their minds won't have much time left for getting into trouble with the law. Mr. Gibson knows some of the answers to the problem of juvenile delinquency but unfortunately he can't go about the country organizing Model UN Assemblies.
