

I Heard Tell

During prohibition it was not uncommon to note "B.Y.O.L." at the bottom of an invitation. Now that has been replaced with "B.Y.O.S."—right, the S is for sugar.

I get a kick out of a fireplace with the wood cracking and the flames leaping over the logs, which reminds me that I haven't been in a home this winter that is kept to the 65 degree temperature as Unk wants us to do.

Notre Dame followers had a case of the blues over the week-end, while grads of the U of R were making whoopee after decisively trimming Hobart.

So far the scrap collection has taken a column inch of newspaper space to a ton of scrap.

The cover on a popular magazine the past week was a dill, "Loose talk may cost lives."

It was below 50 in the southern part of Florida one day the past week which helps take the curse of the frigid weather we had recently.

Altho it was mainly for men, half the people at the Methodist church Sunday night were women.

The joint gathering was a big success, the choir of all male voices, speaker in all, met with hearty approval and brought out my one-man campaign for all the Protestant churches to meet under one roof for the duration. If they did it for the duration they would continue to do it after this war is won.

Both men and women spoke to me about the consolidation of churches, after the service. No one opposed it.

Remember "Snuffy" Mee? He got lonesome for his friends in Brockport and phoned from the camp he is stationed at in California the other evening.

Haven't noticed any war work here carrying a double-up sticker on his car.

The Community Chest drive is well on its way and if all streets contributed as well as Kenyon (that's where I rang door-bells) the "over-the-top" sign would be hung up by tomorrow night.

Two parties made me call the second time but the rest opened the door, asked me to sit down and started digging for their folding money. The solicitation was fun in place of the bore I thought it would be.

Little Johnny Hutchinson, the silent magazine salesman, saw me and said, "Hey, 'Pete,' you want to buy a Post?" and in the same breath continued, "I forgot, I haven't any left."

Have you heard that new piece "Rolie, the Riveter"? It is most appropriate and we do salute the girls who leave glamorous homes to do their bit. Hal, "Rolie, the Riveter."

My apologies to those I did not call on last week for Community Chest, ad. Had to stop selling Monday noon due to a shortage of employees and that hurt. Before long I may make an apology for being three days late with the paper and don't laugh that of either.
