The acting coroner aide that he was married into signing the death certificate.

He told me he'd seen what people thought was a diary in a garage at a friend's house. There was a lot of Marilyn Monroe memorabilia. He said he had increased his offer to $150,000, hoping to persuade him to sell it.

"He's the first serious tip we've had," he said. "A lawyer, who asked not to be identified, said he had heard a $10,000 reward for the diary early this month. "We're investigating him and he's what we call a crank, some quack calling," he said.

Actor, mum, claims to have Monroe diary

The actor — Ted Jordan — told me he'd seen what people thought was a diary in a garage at a friend's house. He said he had increased his offer to $150,000, hoping to persuade him to sell it.

"He's the first serious tip we've had," he said. "A lawyer, who asked not to be identified, said he had heard a $10,000 reward for the diary early this month. "We're investigating him and he's what we call a crank, some quack calling," he said.

Actor, mum, claims to have Monroe diary

The actor — Ted Jordan — told me he'd seen what people thought was a diary in a garage at a friend's house. He said he had increased his offer to $150,000, hoping to persuade him to sell it.