North-South Bus Link With Village Awaits Permits From 8 Towns

The long-sought transportation connections north and south of Newark appeared for reality this week when a Canandaigua bus operator announced plans to establish a bus route between Canandaigua and Newark.

This connection, sought particularly by local industries in their quest for labor in the north and south of the village, is being planned by Martin Gibson of Canandaigua, who now operates chartered buses for school buses in that area.

He said he is making applications for franchise permits from municipalities along the proposed route which would connect Canandaigua, Shortsville, Clifton Springs, Canandaigua, Newark, Sodus, and Sodus Point, a total of 48 miles.

Presently he is awaiting such permission from the City of Canandaigua, and will thereafter petition with the other places and towns and then the State Public Service Commission.

Mr. Gibson was interested in the project through Arthur Newman, chairman of the Newark Chamber of Commerce special committee. Mr. Christy contacted and interviewed several other operators and companies in the past two years in an effort to secure this transportation connection which the chamber feels is badly needed.

Mr. Gibson said he has learned that the Central Greyhound Lines has also made application for municipal franchises through Phelps, Clifton Springs, Canandaigua and Sodus Point, but that he anticipates no change in his plan for this season.

Well-Known County Pair Mark 50th Wedding Date on Monday

Heads of a family known throughout county are Mr. and Mrs. William Marshall of Rose (above), who celebrate Golden Wedding Anniversary next Monday. He is former stage coach driver and town road superintendent; she is native of East Palmyra.

Former Rose Stage Driver, Road Chief And East Palmyra Native Married At Marion 50 Years Ago

One of the county's best-known families, that of William Marshall of Rose, will celebrate six anniversaries during the coming week, highlighted by Mr. and Mrs. Marshall's 50th wedding anniversary next Monday.

The couple will observe the occasion by holding open house for their friends at their home from 1 to 5 p. m. that day, after which they will be entertained by their family at Hotel Wayne, Lyons.

Other anniversaries which will be marked by members of the family during the week include the 31st wedding anniversary of their daughter, Mrs. Edward Miner of Syracuse the same day; the birthdays of William Marshall and a son Gilman, also of Rose, on August 17; the wedding of a son Paul of North Rose on August 18; and the wedding anniversary of Paul's son Jack, also of North Rose on August 20.

The Marshalls have two other sons, Melvin of Webster and Harold of Rose; fifteen grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall lived on a farm a mile north of the village of Rose, for 46 years. He drove the old time stage from Clyde to Rose for 3 years and was former town superintendent of highways for 16 years. He spent the rest of his life farming until a year ago when he retired and he and Mrs. Marshall moved to their present home in the village. Mrs. Marshall ran the Marshall Hatchery for 44 years, starting it for pin money and gradually expanding it into a small business. This enterprise was also discontinued a year ago.

The couple were married in the Methodist parsonage in Marion August 19, 1896, with the Rev. O. D. Davis officiating. Their attendants, no longer living, were Miss Anna Fisher, sister of the bride, and Abram Vankler.

Mr. Marshall was born in Milgrove, Erie County, August 17, 1874, the son of Marion and Rachel Beidock Marshall. She was born in East Palmyra October 23, 1877 to Isaac and Susan Gilman Fisher and moved with her parents shortly afterwards to the place now occupied by a brother, Frank Fisher on the Palmyra-Marion town line.

Two other brothers and a sister, out of a family of nine children are still living. They are William Fisher of Marion, John Fisher of Detroit, Michigan, and Mrs. Norma Boas of Rose. Mr. Marshall is the only survivor of a family of three children.

The jolly pair enjoy recalling how their romance began. After the death of his father, his mother married his wife's grandfather, William Fisher, who lived in the village of Rose. Mrs. Marshall lived with her grandfather for a time, and Mr. Marshall, who then had a job in Rochester, soon became extremely fond of visiting his mother whenever the chance occurred.

In addition to the open house festivities Monday, friends will feté the couple this Saturday evening at a celebration at the Rose Methodist Church of which both have been members for many years.

New Textile Mill Plans Expected Personnel of 400 At Full Operation

Newark's newest industry, the Luzerne Throwing and Winding Co., which started operations last week, plans an expected personnel of from 350 to 400 employees when the plant reaches full operation, according to Paul M. Loefflad of Kingston, Pa., general manager.

"When the Newark plant is in full operation," Mr. Loefflad said, "and together with our other plants, the Luzerne company will be one of the largest throwers in the United States." He said that the Newark branch may be established as the principal mill office of the firm which has mills in Alabama, W. Virginia, Wyoming, Pa., and Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

State Grants $2000 To Village, Town For Center Use

Operations of the Newark Community Center will be aided by the State Youth Commission to the extent of $2,000, following approval of identical grants of $1,000 to the village and town municipalities here by the commission.

Emmett R. Gault, chairman of the Youth Commission, announced this week in Albany that applications of the village and town have both been approved. Mayor John B. Keane and Town Supervisor E. A. Smith said their boards have agreed to turn the grants over to the Community Center as their agency to further recreation work in the community.

The grants will apply on the Center's operating budget and will allow expansion of its program of music, art, crafts, and athletics, said John F. Burdick, Center director. Already several new programs have been designed under the program to meet increasing needs of the Center when it re-opens next month, following its August redecoration recess, the director revealed.

Early Planting Backfires—Crop Prices Suffer

The very early advent of Spring planting weather last March and April was greeted with glee by the those tillers of the soil who were itching to get the seed turned. But today our farmers have discovered that their early start has, in many cases, boomeranged.

Combination of an excellent growing season with that pre-season planting has brought the harvest of many vegetable crops earlier than usual, and coincides with harvesting in many sections south of us. It has resulted in a temporary glut of the market in such items as cabbage, celery, and potatoes and prices are averaging as low as in the depression years.

Take the case of cabbage. A few farmers, among them John VanParys and Irving DeCook of the Thompson town sector started harvesting domestic (early) cabbage the past week. They had a fine crop, but discovered that the price is running only about $12 to $15 a ton. It must be cut, trimmed, bagged, and piled for pickup by the farmer. This handling, they say, costs about $5 a ton, leaving only $8 of $10 a ton to the grower. At the current price of about $12 for

Two Celery Wash Plants Plan to Ship 350 Cars

The celery packing season will soon be in full swing in Newark with upwards of 350 cars expected to be shipped from here by Nov. 1, according to officials of two packing companies.

The Chase Packing Co. plans to handle 200 cars or 80,000 crates of celery, with the J. C. Hutchison Co. preparing to ship 150 cars or 60,000 crates. Operations at the Hutchison plant will start this weekend and the Chase firm intends to open the season on Aug. 26.

Officials of the Chase company said that 85 negro laborers will be imported here by Aug. 22 from Florida and will help in the harvest and packing. The Hutchison firm will employ 54 Negro workers, most of whom have been in Newark since July 1, working for area canneries.

The celery outlook for this year looks fair, according to officials, but the crop is better than last year when unseasonably cold weather caused seed stems. Some of this year's crop was hit by the recent hailstorm in the area. The crop got off to a late spring planting because of unfavorable weather.

Aviation Group Plans Assistance On Field Project

A large group of Newark veterans of World War I want to fly and to learn to fly, and they and many others want a new airport here for that purpose as soon as possible.

That fact was evident at the second meeting of local aviation enthusiasts, principally veterans, held Thursday evening at the Community Center. Upshot of the session was unanimous approval of action to help municipal officials here in starting the airport project in the near future.

This assistance is to include an immediate survey of all discharged servicemen in Arcadia, by questionnaire, to determine how many of them are interested in using an airport to learn flying or airplane mechanics under provisions of the "GI Bill of Rights," or in any other way. According to the expressed desires of nearly all the 35 young men attending the meetings, a substantial group of local ex-GIs would like to take flight and ground instructions with government financial aid, as the GI bill provides, if such facilities were available here.

John P. Newton, a member of the Chamber of Commerce airport committee, presided at the meeting. He and James Wood, member of the same committee, inspected possible area sites for an airport and reported few possibilities.

Since the Village of Newark has already been tentatively approved by the Civil Aeronautics Administration for a share in the half-billion-dollar National Airport Act passed by Congress last May, they said, the aviation group hopes to strengthen the village's chances for maximum aid by showing what a large group of veterans and others are interested in a new field here. The CAA is urging municipalities to continue their airport planning to expedite construction under the act, and will receive applications for funds after Oct. 1.

Record Vote Is Foreseen For Primary

Stirred by two lively contests, Republicans of Wayne County are expected to turn out in record numbers next Tuesday for the party primary election, while the Democrats have no apparent contests and will probably poll only a nominal vote.

Enrolled GOP members who will go to the polls between 12 noon and 9 p.m. Tuesday will be choosing, on the basis of past experience, a Congressman, State Senator, Assemblyman, and County Coroner, as well as various party officials. This is because for many years the Republican candidates have won election to office in this county.

Principal interest in the primary centers around the contests for Congressman from the 38th District and State Assemblyman from Wayne County. In both fights, candidates for the Republican nomination who have been endorsed by the Wayne GOP Committee are being opposed by those who did not receive such recommendation.

Economy Record is Issue

Congressman John Taber, veteran Auburn attorney seeking consecutive two-year term, was endorsed in June by the Wayne committee in preference to Carrollton A. Roberts, Geneva lawyer who has been conducting an intensive campaign. The incumbent and his supporters are appealing for votes mainly on the basis of Taber's fight for economy and lower taxes in the federal government, while Roberts' appeal has been based principally on the length of Taber's tenure in office.

As in 1938, when Mr. Taber last faced a contest in the primary by Charles Russell of Williamson, the veteran legislator is expected to again be opposed by the Townsend Club members of this district. At that time Mr. Russell was an avowed representative of the Townsend organization, but Mr. Roberts has no such affiliation and is expected only to reap the harvest of the long-standing Townsend opposition to Taber because of his refusal to vote for the Old Age Revolving Pension Plan of Dr. Townsend.

Record Vote in 1938

In that 1938 contest Congressman Taber defeated Mr. Russell by about 4,000 vote in the district's primary vote and then again beat him in the general election by about 10,000 when Russell ran as an independent candidate. Wayne County that year turned in a record Republican primary vote of 5,956 and gave Taber a margin of 914 over his rival in his home county.

That contest also brought out the largest primary vote in the township, Arcadia, with 733 Republicans and 231 Democrats casting ballots for an all-time high of 964.

The second GOP contest, arousing almost as much interest as the congressional battle is that for the Republican nomination for State Assembly from Wayne County. Here Mrs. Mildred F. Taylor of Lyons, chairman of the county GOP committee and also a pay clerk in the State Senate, is being opposed by Avery B. Robinson, Newark attorney, Navy veteran, and first ex-serviceman of World War II to seek a county elective office.

Mrs. Taylor received the endorsement of the county committee over Robinson in a vote taken by that body in June, and subsequently the Newark lawyer's name was entered in the primary by petition.

In the last prior primary fight for the Republican nomination for Assemblyman, in 1940, Henry V. Wilson of Wolcott, the retiring incumbent, defeated the same Charles Russell who ran for Congress two years earlier. But that contest brought out only 3,500 enrolled voters in

ALL SHOULD VOTE IN PRIMARY

Next Tuesday's primary election, for the first time in many years, is one of special importance to the Republican voters of Wayne County, owing to the contests for the party nominations for congressman and member of the state assembly.

In the congressional contest the Wayne County vote may well be the deciding margin in the district's verdict, as it has in several instances been the chief factor in the general result.

The choice of the assembly candidate is tantamount to election in Wayne County because of the preponderant Republican majority in every county election.

For the Newark Courier-Gazette's position in these important contests see editorial on Page 2, Section B.
