ROCK OF AGES
HIGH in the wall of some churches, in art glass windows, may often be seen the picture Rock of Ages. Lowering black clouds roll along the vast horizon, and the lurid lightnings flash athwart the ebon masses of the sky. And a great cross of rock is lifted above the wild waves' play. And a woman, with flying garments and widely streaming hair, clings with both hands to the cross of rock.

On a cottage wall in the countryside was seen a picture very like that which has just been described—the same storm-swept expanse of the great deep, the same lightnings zigzagging the sky, the same cross of rock lifting itself above the wild waves' play. But there is one distinctive difference—she clings to the cross with only one hand while with the other she says firm hold upon another who put for her timely aid would be swept away into the stormy deep. Rock of Ages it is, but let it bear another name—Saved to Save Someone Else.

If we would insure the many blessings that we have we must share them with the other fellow. We must share the good in our lives to preserve and multiply it. And the final triumph of the church will come as our attitude and our service are shaped by the fact that we are saved to help save someone else.
