RAIDS AND FIGHTS IN WAR ON MOONSHINE

Dry Leader in West Virginia Mountain Districts Has His Hands Full.

The manufacture and sale of moonshine whiskey in the mountains of southern West Virginia is claiming the close attention of W. S. Lullahan, prohibition commissioner, who, with a large force of deputies, continues to raid and make arrests almost weekly.

There have been times in the last few weeks when the officers have met determined resistance, and already two men, Preston Mullens, an alleged moonshiner, and John D. Kennedy, a deputy sheriff, have lost their lives in the campaign.

This fight, the most serious in recent years, occurred in the Panther creek section of McDowell county, on the Virginia border. Panther creek, the prohibition authorities say, is one of the most active moonshining districts in the state. There, according to Mr. Lullahan, have been gathered some of the most famous manufacturers of moonshine from Buchanan county, Virginia. They know all that is to be known about the industry, and some of them are famed for the qualities of their "corn liquor." Usually their stills are extremely difficult to locate, but gradually the prohibition officers are hunting them out and destroying them.

There is another kind of moonshiner in that section who is giving the officers much trouble. He makes his moonshine as quickly as possible, markets it with the least delay and then moves his still to some other place.

The country is mountainous and rough, with many fertile valleys. These valleys, the prohibition authorities discovered, were this year used to a large extent for the growing of sugar cane, the high price of sugar having driven some of the old-time moonshiners to producing what they needed for domestic and moonshine purposes.

THEED'S FEET

By LILLIAN CYR.

Feeling buoyant with all the confidence and assurance due to a young man in his first long trousers, Theed Lawrence, Jr., stood before a poster calmly surveying the announcement of the sophomore high school dance.

Although he had a perfectly good-looking pair of feet, and took lessons from an excellent master, Theed was in the awkward squad when it came to dancing in public. It was very natural, therefore, that he should suffer himself to lose a bit of his confidence when he saw that Anita Wilkins, the new girl in town, had an excellent figure so quickly that they were growing each other directly in front of the poster.

She stopped and looked at the fateful announcement. "Oh! It will be on Friday evening," she exclaimed. "I'd love to go, but I don't know any of the boys here," she added wistfully.

Immediately the boy defended the lone girl. "I'll take you," he said. It was now Friday evening, and Anita and Theed were approaching the school. The grounds and rooms were ablaze with light. Theed was frightened and miserable; he had an idea that the evening would be disagreeable. Anita was chatting gaily, all unconscious of his anxiety; but when they had reached the hall and she left him to take off her wraps, he breathed more freely.

The school's military band was playing an accompaniment to gay laughter and the rhythm of dancing feet—the dance was on.

Theed groaned inwardly as he thought of the last time he had come to a school dance. By his clumsy dancing he had sent one couple spinning over a settee.

He was brought-back from his horrible reminiscences by the reappearance of Anita, who sweetly said that he could have her first dance.

"Miss Wilkins," he began, hoarsely. "I really don't—er—think—I really don't think I'm feeling well, and if you will please—er—excuse me—"

Anita feared he was ill, and offered to sit out the dance with him, but as he would not hear of it, she reluctantly allowed herself to be led away by Fred Marston.

Theed fled to the cement walks on the grounds. Why was it that he could dance without a break when he was alone and yet not be able to when he reached a girl? He tried it out on the walk. He danced smoothly and easily. He became encouraged. He would try it on the floor with the other dancers that very night. However, on second thought he decided that if he should make a break he would not want to humiliate Anita, and therefore he asked another girl for the next dance. His trial dance worked! He could dance in public! And with such a good dancer as Anita he was sure that his dancing would be even better.

He was just about to ask Anita for the next dance when someone on the platform announced that two prizes would be awarded to the best dancing couple of the next dance number. The prize for the young lady was a white silk bag with pink piping, and a membership card to the exclusive Billiken club. The prize for the young gentleman was a membership card to the Billiken fraternity and a fraternity pin. Theed hadn't counted on this, and he was again about to flee when he saw Anita looking longingly at the lovely, pink-trimmed favor. He now noticed that the pink just matched the ribbon on her dress. She turned and looked at him in the same wistful way as on the day he had asked her to the dance. His ebullient courage reemerged, and he crossed over to her. "You'll have your pretty bag," he said, with smiling assurance. He would show people that he could dance. The flash and pop of the military band suited his mood, obstinate and resolute, and that of Anita, who was determined to win the white silk bag with the pink piping. They darted nimbly in and out among the throng of dancers. On and on went the dance; on and on whirled the competitors.

Almost abruptly the dance came to an end. There was a general turning of heads toward the band platform as the judges stepped into the hall to announce their verdict.

"The prizes for the best dancing of the evening are awarded to Miss Wilkins and Master Lawrence."

After receiving the prizes they were greeted by great applause, and the prize winners were made to perform a dancing skit by the admiring crowd, which was promptly encircled and enjoyed.

They were walking slowly toward her street. "You dance wonderfully!" she exclaimed.

Theed was watching the stars and gazing at his fraternity pin. Would she? He wondered if she would. He held up the fraternity pin, mutely seeking her eyes as they were passing under a corner light.

"Will you wear it for me?" he said hesitatingly.

She bowed her head in silent consent, and suffused with a sudden joy, he pinned it, his hands trembling, on her white dress.

He was a trifle dazed as he left her at her gate by the brilliance of his success. He paused for one breathless moment under an elm tree near the sidewalk; then he took a long breath and turned, a champion dancer, exultingly home.

LIGHTS OF IMMENSE POWER

Flare From Points on United States Coast Are Visible Seventy Miles Out at Sea.

The highest beacon light maintained by the United States for warning navigators is at Cape Mendocino, Cal., 422 feet above sea level. It has a range of 23 miles.

The brightest light and one of the most brilliant in the world is at Navesink, N. J., on the highlands at the entrance of New York bay. It is 25,000,000 candle power and its glare has been seen from 70 miles out in the ocean.

The largest lighthouse "lens" is at Makapu point, on the island of Oahu (Hawaiian group). Its beam at night brings first news to voyagers from the United States that they are nearing the mid-Pacific archipelago. It is called a "hypergradient," the inside diameter of the lens being about nine feet and that of the glass lantern inclosing it 18 feet.

The lens of the Navesink light incloses a powerful electric arc. But, generally speaking, kerosene is the preferred illuminant for many lighthouses.

A lens frequently is built up of glass prisms arranged in panels, the object being to concentrate the light into a beam of maximum brilliancy and range. Some lighthouse lenses are so arranged as to revolve, a contrivance of the sort, weighing perhaps 6,000 pounds, being floated upon mercury and thereby turned so easily that a small bit of clockwork actuated by a 100-pound weight will operate it.

Peace Hath Its Sorrows.

A woman's society, whose principal activity during the war was providing entertainment for the soldiers, was about to give a dance. One of the women who had acted as chaperon meeting a demure miss who had earnestly and strenuously thrown herself into the party and dance game, asked: "Coming to the dance, Luella?" "I think not," answered Luella, with a sigh. "Why what's the reason?" asked the surprised chaperon. "I would have no one to dance with," said Luella. "All our boys are back," replied the chaperon. "There are as many men as ever." "Well," said Luella, "we could always depend on the soldiers, but who's going to make those other men attend?"

Coral's Varying Colors. Genuine coral may be red, pink, white, blue, yellow, green or black, the last being the rarest and most highly prized. The next valuable is the red coral, which is susceptible to a high polish and is most in use for jewelry, being the coral of commerce. Corals are roughly classed under two heads, the horny corals and the stony or stone corals. To the former belong the red and black corals and the white to the latter. Red coral is chiefly found in the Mediterranean. The corals found on the Atlantic coast of Florida are the lime- or stone corals which are the reef-building forms.

HANK and PETE WE AGREE WITH PETE HERE By KEN KLING. GEE, SINCE MY WIFE HAS STARTED TO TAKE UP 'SPIRITUALISM' SHE'S GOT ME NEARLY DAFFY! DOES SHE BELIEVE IN THAT STUFF TOO? SURE! SHE'S STUDYING A BOOK, AND EVERY NIGHT SHE GOES IN A DARK ROOM AND TRIES TO TALK TO A DEAD NEIGHBOR! THAT'S FUNNY, WHAT DOES YOUR WIFE SAY?
