MACDONALD WAITING TO SEE DAWES

Seeks Hoover's Views on Conference Here PLAN IS STARTLING

New English Premier Would Come in August or September If Agreeable

LONDON, June 10. (AP)—The new labor government has opened its career with a move, almost startling in its originality, which cuts abruptly across traditional ideas of diplomacy.

The desire attributed to Premier Ramsey MacDonald, which is said to have been sketched before the first cabinet council today in the course of a general preliminary survey of the whole policy of the government, is to pay a visit to the United States and endeavor to cement peaceful relations between England and America by personal contacts at Washington. Canada also would be represented at the discussions.

In his first administration Premier MacDonald won the greatest honors by his conduct of British foreign policy, and the nation's good will would certainly be with him in his new attempt to dissipate the world difficulties connected with the questions of disarmament and the freedom of the seas. Much, of course, will depend upon circumstances in the premier's first moves. Mr. MacDonald is expected to await the arrival of Ambassador Charles G. Dawes, to learn President's personal views, before doing anything decisive.

The premier's idea is to make a trip to America in August or September, if the visit should be decided upon and proves acceptable to Washington. In those months parliament will be in its summer recess.

Mr. MacDonald already had announced that he hopes to visit Geneva for the meeting of the league assembly in September, so it may be assumed that the Washington trip would precede that to Geneva.

It should be emphasized, however, that all these plans are still dependent upon circumstances and may be changed. That the premier should contemplate such an important step is taken as an indication that his will be the guiding spirit in British foreign policy, despite the fact that he has entrusted the portfolio of foreign affairs to another hand.

3 GIVEN STIFF SENTENCES IN ALCOHOL CASE

Judge Ignores Jury's Leniency Request at Buffalo

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 10. (AP)—Ignoring the petition signed by the jury recommending leniency for the five men convicted in the Illinois alcohol diversion case, Federal Judge Simon L. Adler today imposed maximum prison sentences on three of the individual defendants, besides a peak fine of $10,000 on the defendant company.

Charles R. Berney and G. Chester Illig, both of Buffalo, were sentenced to the federal penitentiary at Atlanta for two years. Because of his youth Carl S. Maundrell, Kenmore, Erie county, was sent to the U. S. Industrial Reform School at Chillicothe, Ohio, where he will serve a similar term. Morris Bloom, manager of the Buffalo renealing plant of the Illinois Alcohol Company of Belvidere, Ill., received a sentence of nine months in the Erie county penitentiary and Louis A. Brown, Buffalo, was fined $1,000.

The defendants, through their attorneys, immediately filed notice of appeal and were released on bail pending arguments before the higher court.

2 SILVERWARE BURGLARS LOSE $10,000 LOOT

Pair Fled After Their Car Was Damaged in Collision

BREWSTER, N. Y., June 10. (AP)—Silverware valued at $10,000 was recovered by state police today in an abandoned automobile here a few hours after it was stolen from the Millbrook, N. Y., home of Thomas W. Lamont, partner of the J. P. Morgan banking house. It was learned tonight.

The automobile, a coupe, had been slightly damaged in a collision with another car on a bridge near Brewster. State police said they learned that two men who had occupied the coupe ran away after the collision.

When the automobile was towed to a Brewster garage, state police opened the rear compartment and found approximately 302 pieces of silver, a set of burglar tools and a rope.

A short time later state police at Millbrook were notified by Mrs. Lamont that she was awakened today by the sound of someone moving about the house. She said that she feared to leave her room but did look out of her window and saw two men, one of them carrying a large bag running across the lawn to the state highway nearby.

INVESTIGATION CONDUCTED IN BORDER DEATH

Agents Gave No Warning, Says Victim's Wife

PATROLMAN, 24, HELD

No Necessity for Shooting, Companion is Quoted as Having Said

INTERNATIONAL FALLS, Minn., June 10. (AP)—Testimony that no warning was heard before a fusillade of shotgun slugs swept his car was given today at the inquest into the death of Henry Virkula, killed near here Saturday by border patrolmen assigned to intercept liquor smuggling.

Mrs. Virkula who was riding with her husband and two children, testified she heard no command to halt. One of the patrolmen opened fire directly as the machine was driven slowly past him, she said.

Emmet J. White, 24-year-old patrolman was held responsible for the shooting by the coroner's jury. He is in jail on a manslaughter charge, but it was said after the verdict was returned that more serious charges probably will be filed. Virkula, a confectioner of Big Falls, was enroute home with his wife and two children when he was slain, a slug striking him in the back of the neck. Mrs. Virkula, and the two children in the back seat of the sedan were not injured.

CEREMONY AT NEW COMMERCE DEPT. BUILDING

Hoover Lays Cornerstone of Structure IN BRIEF ADDRESS

Calls it "Most Important" in Program for City's Beautification

WASHINGTON, June 10. (AP)—President Hoover today laid the cornerstone of the new department of commerce building and termed the structure the most important in the new program for better accommodation of the government and beautification of the national capital.

The chief executive delivered a brief address at the conclusion of a program in which Secretary Lamont, Senator Smoot, of Utah, Representative Elliott of Indiana and George B. Cortelyou, the first secretary of commerce, participated. In setting the stone Mr. Hoover used the trowel employed by George Washington in laying the cornerstone of the capital in 1793.

The occasion Mr. Hoover said, marked the emergence of the commerce department into full maturity and service and had a significance which he, as a former secretary of the department and one who had had some part in planning for the building, could truly appreciate. Setting the cornerstone of any great public building in Washington he declared is a milestone of progress not only of the capital but of the nation as a whole.

Turning to the growth of governmental activities and administrative functions since the establishment of the republic Mr. Hoover acknowledged that this expansion had been the cause of some criticism but declared that such complaints could not be directed at the department of commerce "for it is devoted solely to aid and foster the development of higher standards of living and comfort of our people."

The ideals of the department Mr. Hoover summed up in one closing sentence: "That by cooperation and not by compulsion it should seek to assist in maintaining and giving the impulse of progress to commerce and industry in a nation whose successful economic life underlies advancement in every other field."

BORAH AND ALLEN CLASH ON DEBENTURE

Two Hoover Campaigners Hold Divergent SHARP DEBATE

WASHINGTON, June 10. (AP)—Two of President Hoover's staunchest supporters in the campaign—Senators Borah of Idaho and Allen of Kansas—clashed in the senate today over the export debenture farm relief plan in an exchange which added to the uncertainty surrounding the final vote to be taken at 4 P. M. tomorrow.

The Hoover campaigners disclosed they held widely divergent views. Borah demanded enactment of the debenture section of a redemption of the party campaign pledges, while Allen contended "the failure of the congress to include the debenture in the farm relief bill is not a violation of the republican platform."

The sharp debate left administration leaders more concerned than ever about the outlook for the farm bill, and it was predicted tonight by both sides that the vote on the democratic attempt to force a rejection of the conference report and a roll call vote in the house on debenture section would be so close that vice-president Curtis might be called upon to break a tie.

Borah voted for the debenture plan last month after President Hoover had declared against it. Today was the first time since that issue split the republican ranks that he openly espoused it. He became embroiled with Allen over a reference to newspaper editorials, which the Idaho senator held to disclose the editors were so opposed to debentures mainly because of fear they would ruin the protective structure.

Senator Allen contended the newspapers of the west, including some in Idaho, were "genuinely surprised" when the debenture plan was introduced.

"These papers were singularly unanimous," Allen declared, "to the effect that the democrats, joined by a number of the non-confessionists, have managed, by this exhibition of themselves, to defeat the possibility of farm legislation in this special session, and that was the real merit of the debenture in the democratic mind and something of the merit of its debenture in some of the so-called republican minds."

Senator Borah retorted that Allen's remark "is a cowardly insinuation," and Senator Copeland, democrat New York, declared that he likewise "considered the statement a cowardly insinuation."

Senator Norbeck, republican, South Dakota, declared it was "a mistake to say that the democrats were joined by certain others." "It was the republicans who proposed the debenture plan, and not the democrats," he said.

"What is more, every republican in the committee on agriculture and forestry voted for it. They only withdrew their support when the letter came from the White House." Earlier Allen had challenged Borah to say why he had not advocated the debenture plan at the Kansas City convention, after Borah had read from the republican platform whose agricultural plank he said he had helped to frame.

"Why didn't you advocate putting the debenture provision in the platform," Allen queried, "you surely didn't want to fool the people, did you?"

"I didn't put in the platform," Borah retorted with some heat, "but I did put in the language which would cover it under any possible interpretation."
