STOTTVILLE

16 Below Stottville. Friday was the coldest day of the winter, temperatures of 14 to 16 degrees below zero being reported.

Buss New Car. Frank Seestadt purchased through the C. A. Miller agency a new Hupmobile.

Over $80. Cleared. Over $80 was cleared by the Epworth League of the M. E. church at the supper held last Thursday evening.

Local Scouts Win. The Stottville Boy Scouts outpointed the representatives of the Boy Scouts from Valatie in a series of contests at Bennett Hall Wednesday evening 4 to 14.

Building A New Store. Contractor Warner has commenced the erection of a building on the property of M. A. Emerick which it is understood will be used for a store for the sale of ice cream, soda, soft drinks, etc.

Injured An Eye. Julius Gowanowich suffered quite a painful injury last week when a piece of iron flew from a casting on which he was working and lodged in his eye. The services of a physician were required to remove it.

A Surprise Party. Miss Edna Fitzgerald was very pleasantly surprised at the home of her mother, Mrs. Charles Warner, Saturday evening by a number of her friends. Music, singing and games caused the time to fly very rapidly. The vocal selections of Gilbert Edwards of Hudson were especially enjoyable. Progressive euchre was played, the prize winners being Miss Mertie Ham, Miss Estella Everett, Clayton Cum and Walter Dolan. After the prizes were awarded the guests were invited to the dining room where a bountiful repast awaited them.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Miss Mertie Ham, Miss Estella Everett, Miss Lydia Walker, Charles Ham, Jr., and Harold Winton of Stottville; Walter DeLan and Gilbert Edwards of Hudson, and Miss Edna Fitzgerald of New York. A most enjoyable evening was reported by all present.

Dance Thursday Evening. Don't forget the big dance to be held by the Stottville Baseball Team at Bennett Hall on Thursday evening Feb. 23rd. The boys are working hard to make this a success and have secured Sullivan's Black and White Melody Boys, a New York orchestra to furnish music for the occasion. One of the features of the evening will be a prize waltz. Come and help the boys get away to a good start this season.

Faculty Largely Attended. The euchre given by the Stottville Mutual Aid Society at Bennett Hall Friday evening was quite largely attended in spite of the extremely cold weather. Prizes were awarded as follows: Ladies first, Mrs. John Sli- cock; ladies consolation, Mrs. Arthur Hoosa; gentlemen's first, Clayton Cum; gentlemen's consolation, Lawrence Andrews. Refreshments, consisting of sandwiches, cake and coffee were served after which dancing was enjoyed.

STOTTVILLE PERSONALS. Joseph Gordon, who has been ill with the grip, has resumed his duties with the Atlantic Mills, Inc. Miss Edna Fitzgerald returned to New York Sunday. D. Harry Davis of Great Barrington, Mass., is spending a few days in town. Mr. and Mrs. Olla Whitman of Claverack called on Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Shufelt Sunday.

No Friend of Humanity. He who employs excellent facilities and good wit to humor and please men in their vices, is the greatest enemy of mankind.

CROSSED WIRES

Frances Moulton's eyes were sparkling with anticipation and laughter as she stood before her mirror putting the finishing touches to a most becoming but somewhat unusual costume. To be sure, skirts were being worn short this season, but even the gayest of the gay circles did not carry the prevailing style to quite such a height, for the lowest hem of the lowest ruffle on Frances' party gown scarcely covered the knees, which, stranger still, wore no covering beneath the ruffle, a pair of white socks with tiny pink ribbon bows at the top reaching only partially to the fluffy ruffle.

A call of "Pax's here" from below hastened her movements. Her mother and father called a good-night from the living room. Opening the door, she went quickly down the steps, gave the address to the taxi driver and, stepping in, settled down comfortably on the cushions.

Frances belonged to a club of girls who were always thinking up some novelty in the way of merrymaking. For this evening they had planned that each girl should come prepared to take the character of some acquaintance, to dress and act the part, and Frances had been studying her seven-year-old neighbor and had copied her dancing school frock for the occasion, looking forward gayly to the surprise she would give the girls.

The club was to be entertained at the new home of Isabel Burr, one of the club members, into which her family had moved but a fortnight before.

The taxi stopped and, alighting, Frances went up the steps, where a trim maid opened the door and motioned her up a broad stairway. In the large, nicely furnished chamber above a few wraps showed that she was not the "Pax" arrival.

As she passed down the stairs later two ladies came toward her. They were strangers and looked at her rather oddly. Who had the girls invited to this affair, anyway?

In the doorway at the foot of the stairs she stopped short. Of the group in the room about half were gentlemen, and all were in regulation dress. A lady of middle age came up to her.

The lady who had greeted her came to her side, saying pleasantly: "Pardon me, I do not recall your name."

"Frances Moulton. Are you Isabel's mother?"

"Isabel? Who is Isabel?" The lady looked puzzled.

"Why, Isabel Burr, who entertains our club here this evening." Frances felt that she was in a very real nightmare.

"I am not acquainted with Isabel Burr, and this is the home of Mr. Penderexter Burrage. I am Mrs. Burrage."

Frances looked at her in stunned surprise. "Isn't this—who—where—" she stammered.

"Oh, can't you take me some-where?" She shrunk back from the stairway just as an alert young man came from the hall.

"Hello, mother, have you adopted a little girl? Who is the pink fairy?"

"This young lady seems to have made a mistake of some kind, Lawrence. She thought this was the home of a Miss Burr, a friend of hers."

"Oh, if you will let me explain," and Frances told them who she was, where she lived and the reason for her unusual costume.

Mrs. Burrage looked relieved, and her son laughed heartily, which seemed to relieve the tension, and for the first time Frances smiled and felt a ray of hope.

A few minutes at the telephone solved the riddle. Merely a transposing of numbers had brought Frances to a dance given by Mrs. Penderexter Burrage to the members of the exclusive college club, instead of the informal merrymaking of a group of her intimate friends.

"Oh, how could I have been so heedless? I am so sorry to have caused you all this trouble. If I may ask you more favor, will you be so kind as to telephone for a taxi, and I will relieve you of my society."

"Better than that," returned Lawrence. "Wait here five minutes and I will take you in my car," and he went out before Frances could voice her objections.

A few moments later, as they rolled slowly down the long avenue, for the young man was in no haste to land his winsome passenger, Frances breathed a sigh of relief as she said, "Oh, I am so grateful to you and your mother."

"I will call tomorrow evening so that you may have a better opportunity of expressing your gratitude," said her companion.

"I will be grown up by that time," said Frances, charming, "I am sure."

He brought the car to a stop and jumped out. "The girls have to be helped out of automobiles." Taking her in his arms he put her lightly on the ground, and bending over, said, "and sometimes they reward the big man who takes them to ride."

She escaped from him and ran up the steps as he called after her, "I can wait for my reward—till tomorrow."

The Charm of Sound. "It cannot be denied that the audience applauded your opponent's speech."

"You must bear in mind," replied Senator Sengstrom, "that a speaker, like an auctioneer, may be applauded for his technique, regardless of any ideas he may be attempting to express."
