MEAT INSPECTION FROM HOOF TO HASH.

Sary Ann Believes in Working Tramps and Keeping the Lawn Mowed.—A Fancy Dress Occasion at Jonesville with Ike as a Fashion Reporter.

Dear Mr. Editor:—This hez bin a purty bizzy seeson between showers so fur an I ain't hed much time to rite. We've got quite a nice corn patch an' I think its due to keeping Ike and the cultivator going both ways, and havin' a good skarekrow. Of kours if I couldn't hev but one I'd take the cultivator both ways an' throw out the scarekrow, but I've seen sum fields of corn that it looked like it waz vise versy and the skarekrow had to do all the work keepin' down the weads and keepin' out the krows to boot.

Ike, you know, is artistic. Why he rigged up a skarekrow so natral like that Sary Ann got dinner reddy one day and she went out in the yard and blue the konk shell till she got black in the face and finally walked cleer over to the corn lot where she thought she saw me to see if I 'd lost both my mind and appetite. Maybe she want exasperated tho, when she saw 'twas Ike's skarekrow. (I've got good clothes if I don't wear 'em every day.)

Sary Ann and Tramps.

Sary Ann's death on tramps. She don't beleeve in handin' out a [illegible] to everyone what knocks at [illegible] but she likes to see them [illegible] for their vittles. She says she's always been resolved in some kind of work. She says we've always worked for our livin—and tramps ain't no better than other folks. So she hez sum job for 'em, either sawing or splittin' wood or mowing the lawn. You see Sary Ann and I beleve in farmers havin' just as nice a lawn as you village folks do. There wuz a time before we jined the grange that we used to let the grass grow knee high and then mow it in job lots and wheel it in the barn fer the horse feed every noon, but we've come to the conklusion that there is sum things that it don't pay to do ez we used to. A Farmer hez got jest ez much right to hev a nice lawn in front of his house with geraniums in red butter tubs, an' in Salvation Army keep the--pot--boilin' kitties as any boddy else and I beleeve they would sell better if the lawn run the hole length of the farm between the road and the fence. See the pint? Well, ez I wuz a sayin', Sary Ann keeps the lawn mower handy fer tramps The other day a tramp came along with a wooden leg one arm off above the elbo and the other hand all done up in a sling, thinks I to myself, Sary Ann he's got you now. All he can do iz to eat an it looks as if you'd hev to feed him to boot, and so I watched Sary Ann forum the barn door to see just how she'd manage. I jest started to plant korn near the house and Ike he wanted to try one of them new fangled slot macheen corn planters, the kind you walk along ez fast ez if you wuz on a state road and jab the thing in the ground fer every hill of korn. Well Mr. Editor, what do you spose Sary Ann did? She jest jogged that korn planter on the tramp's wooden leg and she started him in the korn lot plantin' korn. Well, the feller worked so faithfully plantin' his wooden leg with its attachment where every hill should be, that she gave him his dinner, fed him with a spoon and give him 50 cents for the half day.

From Hoof to Hash.

Say, Mr. Editor, can you inform me whether that meat inspeckshun will be from hoof to hash or will it go a hair breauth farther and include the hash? Sary Ann had a lot of kanned korn, but she got last winter for an emergency. The emergency hez cum for I noticed the tin cans unopened down in the corner of the barnyard fence. This meat inspeckshun inquiry is going to make more vegetarians and naturally more ostogenarians in consequense. Sary Ann's wuz plantin' water melon seed the other day and I picked up the wrapper and under the picture wuz this effusion. "It is pure water, distilled and put up by nature herself, who needs no government label to certify, to the cleanliness of her methods and the innocence of her sun-kissed chemistry. It is the tiniest trace of earth salts. It is delicate aroma. It is slightly a food, generously a drink, and altogether poetry." I've seen the time when it took Sun kolera drops to knock out that sun kissed chemistry after Ike hed got home from the Sunday school picnic an' hed access to the barrel of water melons. T'want no poetry 'bout it nuther, fer a few minutes before midnight

A Dress Occasion.

The other nite there wuz quite a high toned party fer Jonesville up to Silo Perkins, as their daughter wuz going to make her dabeau, 4th of July eve. Ike wuz invited and I don't know as you would care to publish any of the partiklers abou. the affair because there ain't much partiklers, akordin to what Ike sed, but there new dresses and how they wore 'em. Ike hez got quite an eye fer dress and he'd make a good fashion editor fer the 4 Track news.

"Silo's girl wuz the star of the evening of course, because she was the debeautantee," sez Ike, "she wore an empire state frock in bannana colored crepe de shine, satin faced cloth and lace trimmings. The skirt hung in graceful folds from a guaged belt and had a 14 inch hem; above this wuz stripes of chiffon cloth cut bias, north east by south west, scalloped oyster effect, the lower edge of the cloth being finished with pen knife pleatings of taff tea the same shade as the crope. The short waisted bodice was arranged bolero fashion with handsome lase draped about the vest [illegible] shoulders were quite long and covered with appliequegue of heavy lace draped over chiffon, cream puffs of the elbow sleeves. She was charming, her brick hair being caught up by a suspender buckle of diamonds; she carried a bokay of nasturshums. Mrs. Perkins wore a dainty gown in sheer summer effect of white and green pin-striped silk with trimmigs of rich green ribbon velvet. The frock hed quantities of ice creamy white taffeta bands about the neck with loops of the green ribbon velvet dangling down the front of the vest. The effect of the frock was princesse, the skirt part being made with flat tucks stitched about the hips. In addition to the tucks there were trimmings of Irish, Dutch and French lace run through a square design.

Miss Doosenbury was charming in her usual beauty and wore a delightful confection in mouzzeline de soie of neutral tint tucked in girdle effect about the waiste line, but below this point it broadened in plaits which when they reached the knees were released to afford the regular flare; over the shulder of the korsage were bands of rich Irish crochet embroidered in bits of mauve, pale green, apricot and white silk threads. The bands played down the front and joined with the skirt and gave the effect of gulmpe mode.

Space forbids a general description of all the handsome costumes only that the surplice blouse or bodice seemed a great favorite, with drapery, leaving a V shaped opening filled in with transparent gulmpe, chemisette or vest of lace or embroidery; a muslin beautifully mounted over silk filled with fine lace was seen in profusion on several others, which I am sure equaled in dazzle tion what they wore at your Chatham Alumni Bawl. Sary Ann wore her blue bumbazine which as hez jest fixed over with dish washeseves or one of her tubable frocks could have compared favorably with some what Ike described. I must close and go and help Ike

REVOLVER USED.

Shooting Affray at Niverville Frank Cheesbrough Shot.

Sunday morning about two o'clock Frank Cheesbrough of Niverville, with several others were on the B and A station platform. One of the party sat on a truck and some one threw water on him when he became angry and started to punish the offender when Cheesebrough interfered and drawing a revolver was about to shoot when the man struck his arm breaking his forefinger and causing the bullet to enter Cheesebrough's leg above the knee, passing nearly through.

Dr. D. L. Spaulding advised him to go to the hospital or call in a [illegible] and Spaulding located and removed the bullet.

Fire in Atlantic City.

Fire in Young's Pier theatre Saturday night caused a panic in which more than one hundred persons were cut and bruised. The theatre stands over the ocean, and a moving picture entertainment was in progress when an explosion occurred in the gallery inside of the booth where the man operating the machine was locked in. Flames instantly shot up to the ceiling. Cries of fire threw into a panic fifteen hundred people, who made a wild rush for the doors Windows were smashed and children were handed through them to persons on the outside. The damage, except for smashed windows and the destroyed machine, will not exceed $1,000. Trinkets of all kinds were gathered up from the floor.

Struck Paregoric Not Oil.

One day in Washington recently a group of politicians were talking, when "Uncle Joe" Cannon was reminded of a story.

"There was a friend of mine in Ohio," said he, "who once joyfully sought an oil expert, declaring that he had struck this fluid on his land. He brought a sample in a bottle. Now evidently my friend had been in a great hurry, hastily grabbing the first bottle at hand, for when the chemist had duly analyzed the sample submitted he sent the following telegraphic report: "'Find no trace of oil. You have struck paregoric.'"

Lots of Autos.

UNIQUE RELIGIOUS MODELS.

Herod's Temple and Others a Gift to a Jersey Seminary.

John S. Bussing, of New York, has presented to the Theological Seminary of the Dutch Reformed church of New Brunswick, N. J., three models of the Ark of the Covenant, the Tabernacle and Herod's Temple. The Ark of the Covent is the work of a sculptor and is skillfully done. The Tabernacle is in blue and purple and scarlet and silver and gold, with 3,769 separate parts, each put together by hand. It is so arranged that almost every individual part can be easily inspected. In the Temple an idea of the labor and skill required may be gained by noting the 400 Corinthian columns employed in its construction. They were all made by hand.
