SALAMANCA, N. Y.

NATIONAL NEWS.

Read the President's message, to be found in this issue.

THE all-absorbing question of the office-holder—what view will President Cleveland take of the civil-service act?

In a short time the Senatorial contest in this State will wax warm. Let us have a man of business; he is badly needed.

THERE are now 1,045 bills awaiting action by the National House of Representatives. It is safe to say but few of them will ever see the light of day.

It is said the estimates for six of the annual appropriation bills have already been placed in the hands of sub-committees, and it is thought some of them will be ready for consideration by Congress in a few days.

In spite of the cries of politicians to the contrary, the business outlook seems to be improving. Let every man attend closely to the business in which he is engaged and the change of administration will not affect him.

Ten Ketcher corps of the National Army seems to be in a thriving condition. The Herald attributes its success to "the persuasive eloquence and glowing words of the Buffalo boss who is now located permanently with the army, acting as Aides-de-camp to Captain Jones."

Congress, at its present session will be called upon to consider a bill for the abolition of the present system of deputy marshals and supervisors of election, and a resolution will also be introduced authorizing the committee on expenditures in the department of justice to investigate the conduct of United States marshals and deputies in Ohio during the October elections.

WASHINGTON CITY is already exercised over the dedication of the Washington monument, which is nearly completed, and the inauguration of President Cleveland. A grand demonstration is proposed for each of these events. There will doubtless be much more pomp and vanity over the dedication of his monument than the quiet, modest taste of the Father of his Country was wont to approve; but he, like the President-elect, will not be able to help it.

In his message to Congress, read on the assembling of that body on Monday last, President Arthur refers to the small majority by which the election for President was this year determined, recalls the contest over the counting of the electoral vote eight years ago, and urges Congress to provide more precise and definite regulations for the counting of the electoral vote, saying he is persuaded that by the people at large any of the measures of relief thus far proposed would be referred to continued inaction. He congratulates the country upon its continued amicable relations with all foreign powers, and speaks of several treaties to be laid before the Senate, notably one concluded with Spain relative to reciprocity with the Spanish possessions in the West Indies, and the one with Nicaragua authorizing the building by the United States of a ship canal across that republic. He lays before Congress four paths of policy for the building up of our foreign trade and the turning to good account many of the embarrassing elements in the great national conflict between protection and free trade. In referring to the civil service, the President says the system has fully answered the expectations of his friends in securing competent and faithful public servants and in protecting the appointing officers of the Government from the pressure of personal importunity and from the labor of examining the claims of rival candidates for public employment. He strongly urges attention to the duty of restoring our navy to the high state of efficiency which formerly characterized it. The President indorses the recommendation of the Secretary of the Treasury in reference to the stoppage of the outgo of silver dollars, agrees with the recommendation of the Postmaster General relative to increasing the weight of letter weight to one ounce, reducing the postage on drop letters to one cent, and the exceptional dispatch of letters from delivery offices, and with the recommendation of the Secretary of the Interior relative to the necessity of passing adequate laws for the forfeiture of land grants. The passage of a national bankruptcy law is urged, and with some severity he asks Congress to go to the very limits permitted by the constitution in dealing with the Mormon crime of polygamy. The message gives a concise summary of the condition of the affairs of the Government, is full of information on matters that will come before Congress, and shows, in a marked degree, the business capacity of the President and his knowledge of the details of the subjects with which he deals. We furnish it to our readers in the form of an extra, and assure them it is well worth a careful perusal.
