

HOME AT LONG LAST!
 MONTROSE — Henrik Hudson High School's football team, better known as the "Sailors," will play in a strange place on next Saturday — their home field. It will be the first home game for the team in four years. Reason is that the gridiron here was off limits for the gridgers because of construction near it and drainage problems. Both hindrances have been cleared up.

700 Hear About Fox Lane As Parents, Teachers Meet
 More than 700 parents, teachers and students, believed to be a record crowd for an "educational" meeting in the Bedford Central District, thronged Fox Lane School on Wednesday night of last week, for the opening meeting of the season of the Fox Lane Association. During a fast-paced hour-and-twenty-minute session they heard a series of seven speakers describe the Fox Lane educational program as the "pursuit of excellence" in academic, vocational and extracurricular affairs. The phrase derives from a recent report on education in America, prepared by the Rockefeller Brothers Fund. They also tested their knowledge of Fox Lane School by participating in a 20-question quiz won by a student, Chris Lomas. The record turnout, unexpected because of the rainy weather, was hailed by association officers as tangible evidence of growing citizen interest in the educational program offered young people in the district. In his brief main talk of the evening, Dr. Arthur B. Shedd, Fox Lane principal, paid tribute to the high calibre of the school faculty as the key element in encouraging students of varying capacities to make the most of the educational program offered them. William McGee, assistant principal, pointed out that the comprehensive extracurricular program offered Fox Lane students was a "balanced" one and that there was a high correlation between leadership in classrooms and in team and club activities. Eighteen of the 20 new teachers at Fox Lane this Fall were introduced individually by Assistant Principal Howard Lynch. Later in the evening it was pointed out that Fox Lane faculty members have already earned a total of 150 graduate degrees and that a number of teachers are currently candidates for graduate honors. Mrs. Maas Elected to Board

Discussing "The Dimensions of Fox Lane School from the Faculty Viewpoint" Charles Sansone, head of the social studies department, said that the school was attractive to superior teachers because of its high goals and because it encouraged "friendly, creative competition" to produce superior results. Two student presentations were features of the meeting. Barbara Brod, president of the student government organization and a Director of the Association, outlined the scope of the academic and vocational program available at the school and the system of representational government adopted by the students. Richard Muller, association chairman, illustrated the scope of the student activities program by introducing representatives of approximately 30 athletic teams and "special interest" clubs. During the brief business meeting which opened the program Mrs. Frederick Maas of Bedford Village was elected to fill a vacancy of the association's Board of Directors. The members also voted to refer to a constitutional committee a proposal to make certain changes in the charter adopted at the time the association was founded in the Spring of 1957. Scholarships totalled $12,050. Plans for a 20-minute question-and-answer period were deferred by general consent, to allow time for registration of new members. Written questions submitted by guests at the close of the meeting will be answered at the Oct. 15 meeting of the association or in a general bulletin to the membership, if this is feasible, it was announced. Following the meeting it was disclosed that approximately 400 persons had paid membership dues of fifty cents for the coming year. Highlights of factual data on Fox Lane reported during the meeting included the following: The school will be operating "at capacity" two years from now
