Yesterday (the 12th March) was the traditional day on which the Bears and other hybernating animals come out from their winter dens and take a look at the weather or Vennor's Almanac. It is said if they see their shadow they im mediately return to their couch, for another three or four week's sleep; but if they do not they remain awake, for there is to be more severe wintry weather. Did any body see any bears around, loope like? They must have timed it sharp to have caught a shadow yesterday.

The deepest snow of the season, in this section, fell on Sunday and Sunday night last. It was about twelve inches in depth and rather moist. On Tuesday a strong south wind succeeded in drifting it in some places, but the rain that followed in the evening and night stopped that fun. With the snow, the wind and drifts, the rain, and the slush, we have had pretty poor sleighing through the week. Haven't heard of any leap year ride in all that time.

There are, now and then, found very plain evidences of the occupation of this section of the country before the coming of Champlain and subsequent whitemen, which if noted would be very interesting to the archæologist, or, indeed, to any one interested in the history of the country even if he is not a student of its antiquities. We have several pieces of flint which, undoubtedly, were found in a place where the native Indian or aboriginal had at some remote time been engaged in the manufacture of arrow-heads.

On a part of the farm of J. G. Livingston, in Lewis, locally called "the plain," the snow water, when the frost is "coming out," and heavy spring rains have, within the last fifteen to twenty-five years, washed out a considerable gully on the easterly edge of the locality. It was attempted at divers times to stop the trenching of the sandy formation by putting in brush and straw, and similar obstructive material, but without permanent effect.

During the summer last past, some children wandering about chanced to discover some bits of peculiar stone on the side of the gully, and out of childish curiosity picked up many pieces and carried them away. There is no stone around there, other than rounded bits of coarse gravel, and, indeed, but little of that; and what there is, is of the grayish color of the rock of the country broken and disintegrating. These bits of flint are of very dark color, entirely unlike anything of rock kind found in place in the surrounding country, with a cleavage, if not peculiar to the flint formation at least unlike any of our native rock. The pieces we have seen are obviously bits which were attempted to be fashioned into arrow-heads and spoiled in the process. The children represented that there was quite a large quantity of these bits there; and it would seem that the gully had just trenched upon the edge of the deposit of flint material. They do not appear to have found any fully formed arrow-heads.

We infer from these slight developments, that this was not, perhaps, a permanent place of residence for the aborigines, but was one at which they remained for a season, perhaps at different seasons, and at which they prepared their weapons for the chase or for war. We have promised ourself a further investigation of this deposit indicating a former occupancy of the country, but delayed until the frosts and snows of winter effectually shut us off, but we hope yet to learn something more about them.

But, meanwhile, conjecture may be busy in looking back over the unrecorded and untraceable past. About, or nearly half a mile northerly from where these relics of Indian life were found, on a lower level, through which winds a large branch of the river, which is itself a principal branch of the Hoquet river, and surrounded by a swamp, (now, we believe, "cleared off" is a remarkable hillock or mound of earth 15 feet, perhaps, now only about fifteen feet in height above the swamp, nearly round, covers probably less than an eighth of an acre, and was covered, a few years since, with forest growth. It has been conjectured to be the work of former occupants of the country. Professor Dolfaas, who has made somewhat of a study of the mounds and other evident works of an ancient and forgotten race in the west, and is an authority on that and kindred subjects, has pronounced it worthy of serious investigation whether it be a work of man or of nature. It is alike difficult for a passing observer to declare it to be a deposit from natural causes, disconnected with the neighboring and higher plateau by twenty or thirty rods of deep swamp, or a work of human hands for defensive or other purposes. Could it have been a place built up for refuge and defense and which was about to be assailed with the arrows manufactured at the camp just across the narrow strip of sandy plain and beyond the klicking sound of the primeval hammers of the workmen? Let the learned and the curious in aboriginal antiquities determine

SCHROON LAKE.

MARCH, 10th, 1884

Can this be "balmy spring"
Of which the poets sing?

Mr Burton the energetic and faithful mail carrier from Elizabethtown, must have had a hard time to-day, as he did not arrive here until over two hours later than usually. The roads are terribly drifted, almost impassable

Schroon would be rather dull at present were it not for the measles making things lively. There are about one hundred new cases in the village and vicinity

Last Wednesday, Wallace Wilcox and David King of this place, took their departure for Lamore, Da., where Wilcox is to enter his brother Orrin's law office

A grocery store is being erected about a mile south of the village, by a Mr Hudson from Crown Point

Capt. and Mrs Barnett, accompanied by Mrs P. S. Russell, are visiting friends at Crown Point

Frank Daniels is building a shop on Main street, near Fowler's steam mill

Pickerel fishing remains good. A small lad caught a twelve-pounder recently

Mrs. Milo Squires of La Grange, Ill., who, with her family, moved from Schroon about three years ago, has been back on a visit. She started for her home on the 6th inst.

Our reliable architect and builder, Luther Smith, with a number of men in his employ has commenced work on a cottage for a New York gentleman, in the vicinity of Tyrrell's steam mill

Robert Taylor has bought one-half of the interest in the Platt Pulpit store.

The village school has closed for the present, in order to give the children a chance to indulge in the measles.

We have very good sledding now for the reason that they can draw their loads of wood and such on the crust. If any had long continue this or the middle has been no variable.

O. A. West had purchased a new organ. It arrived this week, and is a beauty, both in tone and appearance, being one of the "Loring and Blake best."

Henry Lowe has purchased a spirited 3 year old horse from a man in Horicon, intending it for a gentleman in New York.

Mrs. John I. Morse will return from New York next week, accompanied by her sister.

Deer seem to be plenty this season. A crew of lumbermen ran across a yard of a dozen or more not long since.

Patrick O'Donnell is, at present, suffering with a frozen foot.

Carrie Lynn, who has been living at Pottersville, has returned home, for a while.

David Lahey has finished his job, and vacated his shanty, for the season. Patrick Flynn, ditto.

Michael Lynn, Jr., met with a sad accident on the 1st inst. at Newcomb. While chopping in the woods a lodged tree fell on him, breaking his leg above the knee. He was taken home, where he was attended by Dr. J. C. Wall.

After a long waiting to hear how the P. O. matter would be decided an order came to have it removed. So much for politics.

The mumps are ever faithful. Minerva will be the death of them though. At least we hope so as they are very disagreeable. The writer is at present a victim of their schemes

Lines to a Friend

BY W. J. TOWN

[Written for her that was Miss Ellen R. Thrall of Rutland, Vt., in 1847, who is now Mrs. McNeal of San Francisco, Cal.]

Friends, so requish and annoying,
Ever making and destroying
Other's peace where'er they may set
Not corset aught for what they regret,
Laid their sins at our door,
Now we'll them hold none other
Before again thy face I see
Perchance twill aged and homely be
Those sparkling eyes which I admire,
Which now and then let out the fire
May yet become like lumps of lead
Or like pocket cushion in rough hand.
Thy nose which is the central place
Of many a native nameless grace,
May yet become as red beside are
And grievously thy beauty mar
Thy mouth, which now is small and pretty,
Whence issues sweetly many a ditty,
The tones of which can cross and please
Far more than mine doth wrangle chorus
This, sister, yet may be distorted,
And leave you well nigh broken hearted
Since trials more as these may fall,
And, you the victim of them all
A remedy I'd recommend.
A cure that doctors no'er can lend
'Twill make thee comely, fair, exceeding;
'Twill even to thine friends be leading
Riches, home thou wond'rous cure!
Less it not, but keep it sure.
Cultivate these virtues rare
Which so adorn the friendly fair;
Let pure intentions rule thy heart
And every act be free from art;
Let moderation curb thy tongue
So shall not quite at thee be flung;
Let prudence bend her erring ear
And right good temper shine be made;
Let sudden anger hide its folly
And charitableness drive melancholy;
Thy conversation, chaste and free
Thy spirit high and lowly be:
The sky of knowledge, gemmed and starred
Is worthy most of high regard
O, pure it ever stayed by flight,
The substance drink with heed diligent,
Her genting comes all morning light
Shall shine thy mind with wisdom bright
Thus, with inspirations pure
On which thy good may feed and live,
Shall these thy talents all improve,
By these thou shalt find true peace,
In longer years to these gone
The opinion dear to them possess
That them with more we thanks to owe
Ourselves for ages, being wise;
Yourself again, again shall say
Thank you, my sister, ever for this word
Which I could say, no more dear,
Than this my friends, Ourselves and I
And thereby I am your friend
Forever, as I have been
Forever, as I have been

What Will Happen If We Should Freeze.

Jamestown, N. Y., March 11.—An old guide from the Lake Chautauqua says that things will then have been changed by the Almighty. Two men caught by William Courtney, an old hunter, in the deep snow near Pleasee Lake. Ohio was a good sized deer, accompanied by her fawn. A brother of Courtney caught the fawn very a full-sized white buck. The fawn has died, but the other two animals are doing well. They are on exhibition, and excite much interest among hunters and guides, who say that they are the first specimens of the kind ever discovered in that neighborhood.—[Sun.

How to Cook Water.

I must tell you the old story of how the late Charles Delmonico used to talk about the new hot-water cure. He said the Delmonicos were the first to recommend it to guests who complained of having no appetite. "Take a cup of hot water and a lemon and you will feel better," was the formula adopted, and the cup of hot water and lemon was simply a little hot water with a drop of lemon juice in it to take away the insipidity. For this anti-bilious remedy, the caterers charged the price of a drink of their best liquors—twenty-five cents or more—and it certainly was a wiser way to spend small change than in alcohol. "Few people know how to cook water," Charles used to affirm. "The secret is in putting good, fresh water into a neat kettle, already quite warm, and setting the water to boiling quickly, and then taking it right off for use in tea, coffee or other drinks, before it is spoiled. To let it steam and simmer and evaporate until the good water was all in the atmosphere, and the lime and iron and dregs only in the kettle—bah! that is what makes a great many people sick, and is worse than no water at all." Every lady who reads this valuable receipt of a great and careful cook should never forget how to cook water. [N. Y. Correspondent Chicago Ev. Journal.

Paper Soap.

A man in a hurry, who slipped on a muddy crossing on upper Sixth avenue yesterday and rolled his hands in saving himself from sprawling full length on the roadway, went into a drug store to wash his hands

"Got any spare soap?" he asked

The druggist drew a tiny book from his coat pocket, and, tearing out a sheet of paper about three inches square, handed it to the man. The latter wet his hands, and rubbing them with the paper, found, to his surprise, that the paper made a fine lather and thoroughly cleansed the hands

"Paper soap," said the druggist with a laugh. "A novelty mainly intended for the use of travellers. The paper is coated with soap and is just as good as the regular article, in addition to being much handier. There are fifty soap sheets in one of those books. They cost about as much as an ordinary cake of soap."

Extravagance of Southern Negroes

An observant traveler in the south is struck with the almost incredible improvidence and extravagance of the negroes. Of the future they take as little thought as butterflies, or grasshoppers. In expenditure they are sailors, in planning for the future they are New York aldermen. The other day a negro just paid off from long work on the railroad, with $60, came into a store, and after buying a silk handkerchief for a dollar, turned round and bought a thirteen and a half dollar trunk to put it in. "I have it on the word of Talmage C. Miller that he saw a negro after buying a high silk hat, too small for him, invest the balance of his funds in eleven pairs of white kid gloves, the entire stock on hand which caught his eye and happened to please his fancy. I, after Christmas time, saw at the station a group who, their holiday ended, were going to distribute themselves for work along the line of railroad. Many one without shoes wore a silk hat, and the greater part of them, dressed in dilapidated shirts and trousers, carried what else they had of clothes in brass-new russet leather nickel-plated traveling bags. Who will teach them economy? Not the merchant, for it is his interest to sell them goods, irrespective of the utilities. "In the negro trade in a great measure that keeps the stores thriving. And having bought a piece of land which he wants, the negro is instantly ready and willing to mortgage it to buy something which he does not want."

A Wonderful Indian Invention—The Great Tuscarora Drawing Pure Cretan from a Whiskey Barrel.

To THE EDITOR OF THE SUN—Sir: I have lived in my homestead at Pendleton for thirty years. I have three wells on my place and I used them until the Croton water was introduced there, about ten years ago. I then discovered from an examination of the family tea bottle that its inside was deeply encrusted with a thick limestone substance, too much lime and not enough iron in the water for good health. I concluded to remedy this in a simple and economical way.

Purchased a clean whiskey barrel	$1 00
A bushel of Rockaway sand	10
A bushel of white stone roofing pebbles	25
A bushel of charcoal	25
A wooden barrel faucet	10
A false wood bottom and cover to barrel	25
Total cost	$1 85

The false wood bottom I perforated by ten half inch holes and placed them about nine inches above the lower one. I then covered the upper bottom with an inch layer of the white pebbles then a layer of the Rockaway sand, and then one of the charcoal. I repeated the operation, making six layers in all. I made a suitable wood cover to the barrel, and when finished, placed it in a convenient position near my kitchen. I have had it filled with Croton water every morning since, and have used this thoroughly filtered and pure water for tea, coffee, and drinking purposes for the family for about ten years past. Before that I had fever and ague in the family.

All wells should be cleansed each spring. Debris, dead toads, Frogs, Records, and worms will be found. Water becomes impregnated with deleterious substances, and is impure and unhealthy.

Since I have used my cheap and simple filter I have had no fever and ague nor malarious diseases in my family, and I have saved from its use at least $200 in doctor's bills.

The North woods, the Adirondacks, must be spared and the watersheds of the noble Hudson protected. The kidneys, the strainers of the human body, must be washed out and kept clean, or Bright's and other diseases will be engendered, destroying human life. I recommend my cheap and simple filter

Winchester, Miss., says: I am personally acquainted with Dr. and Mrs. Chenoweth, my immediate neighbors. Before I commenced using Dr. Chenoweth's Cough Syrup, my wife was confined to her bed with a severe cough and pain in the breast. She was given up to die. I began using Dr. Chenoweth's Cough Syrup, and in a few days she was able to be up and about the house. I have used it myself with good effect. I have been postmaster here for four years, and have been solicited by many to recommend it. Dr. Chenoweth's Cough Syrup is the best cough medicine I ever used. Hon. T. Bowen, P.M. Sold

THE GOOD LUCK SALVE

Shipping by Parcels.

Post Herald (Republican) in Chicago Tribune: The enormous amount of business done by express companies throughout the west. The trains going west over the Northern Pacific railroad are well filled with men bound for the mines. The excitement is greatest among old miners, who, for some reason or other, believe Coeur d'Alene is the richest discovery ever made in this country. The Black Hills miners are flocking to Miles City, where they are taken up by the west-bound trains and conveyed to Rat's Drum, Bellknap and Trout Creek, the nearest stations to the mines. It is believed 9,000 miners from the Black Hills alone will go to Coeur d'Alene. About 200 men a day are reported arriving at the mines and fifteen leaving, as is usual in such cases. The stories about the mines are very conflicting, but most people believe them to be rich. John Smith, a thoroughly reliable man and a friend of Gen. Brisbin, writes here to him: "You can be assured the mines are genuine. There can be no question about the richness of the quartz lodes discovered during the fall and winter. The ore assays away up into the thousands per ton. The placer mines also are extensive, and will yield anywhere from $7 to $80 and $100 per day to the hand. The nuggets found weigh $20 to $140, and they are not scarce. The oldest Pacific slope miners and those from Colorado and the Black Hills are the most enthusiastic, and there is but one opinion among them and all practical miners about the mines, and that is, they are very rich and extensive. I will be responsible for what I say to you and you can repeat it to whoever you please." No one who knows Mr. Smith will doubt the entire sincerity of what he says. Still he may be mistaken.

BUYERS' WAYS.

According to the correspondent of the Boston Gazette, New York people are natural traders in buying jewelry and such things. Said a noted jeweller to him: "The boy on sees there any enthusiasm. They would rather make out that they didn't quite like the thing they were getting. They reserve their songs of praise for the family circle." This is in the main quite true. It is the test of the buyer to determine what he says until after he has got possession of it. Then there is no one in the world who can speak so highly of his own. An instance occurred to a well known brica-brac store only the other day. Two ladies of country came to make a purchase. They saw a pair of andirons which they said might do, but they were quite indifferent. They, however, asked the price, which they affected to think was rather high. In the meantime one said to the other in French that they were much finer than another pair they had seen at an uptown shop for which double the price was asked. The salesman, who was on the point of lowering the price, happened to understand the language of France, and kept his own counsels. There is such a thing as being too clever.

THE HOTEL RUNNER.

How He Plays a Very Conscious Vocation in San Francisco.

It is said to think what the fate of travellers and visitors to San Francisco would be were they not properly taken in hand by the faithful hotel runner and carefully escorted through a maze of streets to "the best hotel in the city, sir!" The existence of the hotel runner, with this duty in hand, seems to have been noted about the time that the first public house was erected on this sandy peninsula. He has grown with the growth of the city, multiplied with the increase of hotels, and to-day sings his songs, cracks his jokes and presses to the front with a tenacity of purpose that is irrepressible. He is a genius in many respects. He is an animated encyclopedia as regards the arrival of trains, boats and steamships; no matter what hour of the day or the night strangers arrive at the wharves of the city he is in the front rank to welcome them and tender them the freedom of the metropolis and the hospitality of his house at the lowest rates. He becomes an accurate judge of character and can generally tell at a glance whether a man will be satisfied with the accommodations and terms he can offer him or will demand something cheaper or better. So, in approaching new arrivals, the runner speaks his piece as experience teaches him will be most successful. To one he is plain and blunt, to another insinuating, glib of tongue, pleading, perhaps. When he begins operations among the arrivals by an ocean steamship the runner frenziedly shouts himself hoarse enumerating the unexcelled qualification of the hotel he represents. He will, with the utmost docility, however, approach the man whose appearance indicates the experienced traveller, and with due deference, offer him a card, while the next who comes down the gang-plank may have his arm half twisted off by the same runner and affrightedly witness a struggle between two or three of the species for possession of his baggage. When a scooter or one of the river steamers arrives, with residents of the interior aboard, the runner is in his glory. The callow youth from the valley, making his first visit to the city, ignorant of its streets and buildings, is a delightful vision to the runner, who "spots the fresh" and soon has his carpet sack in the boot of the hotel coach, while the awed young man is gasping for air within the vehicle itself. Possible a staid old farmer comes on the same boat with the "fresh" young man, and by seniority of years and the light of experience indicates a preference for the favorite hotel of his last visit to the city. He is quickly laughed to scorn; that hotel is out of date—turned into a Chinese opium den—or some other horrible abode; and the runner clinches the fetters upon his victim by recounting the stylish luxury of the hotel which he is working for—all to be had at remarkably low rates. Nine times out of ten the farmer is taken along with the fresh young man, and the driver of the coach is cautioned not to pass the X. Hotel, "because that old hoosier inside is struck after it!" It is somewhat different from the tactics employed in securing the patronage of overland immigrants. The immigrants usually cross the ferry in the morning, when the steamers are not overburdened with local traffic. The majority of the immigrants being of the laboring classes—farmers, gardeners, woodmen, fishermen and kindred occupations—the runner affects great familiarity with their future welfare and proffers sage advice regarding the best locality for strangers to settle. He relates—in confidence—to a stalwart couple of woodchoppers the flattering invitations received daily at his hotel from Humboldt millmen inquiring for laborers at unheard-of wages. If the immigrant is a farmer and is accompanied by his wife and brood, why only half rates will be charged for children, nothing for the baby and the most liberal rates extended to the couple. Then, without allowing an opportunity to think, the runner gathers the bundles and parcels from each child, hooks madam's lunch basket on one arm, the farmer's valise on the other and carries all to the bow of the steamer, where, on arrival at the wharf, the hotel coachmen will find them, properly checked, while the runner is looking after the farmer's heavier luggage. When the immigrant is burdened only with a roll of blankets and a bundle of clothing he has no hope whatever of escaping the runner. He may bluff the solicitor on the steamer, but when he attempts to walk ashore, bearing his blankets and bundle, the runner takes him by storm. A scuffle ensues in one hand and knows his duty. "This way, you fellow with the blankets!" he authoritatively commences, and wrenches the bundle from the immigrant's grasp. The first runner then steps up, lifts the blankets from the man's shoulders and pushes him along to the coach, into which the immigrant and bundles are thrown without ceremony. "Immigrant snatching" is the vernacular for this method, which is practised every day. Occasionally a self-willed traveller rebels against summary dealings, and it has been known where the runner was spread upon the wharf by an irate customer he was endeavoring to snatch.—San Francisco Chronicle.
