'Help communities help themselves' program scheduled

An eight-session drug awareness program will be conducted in Gouverneur this fall by the "Help Communities Help Themselves" training team under the auspices of the Gouverneur Narcotic Guidance Council.

Fifteen local community-minded citizens are being contacted by the team to participate in this first "core group" training program, which is the result of two-weeks intensive training "Help Communities Help Themselves" team underwent at Yale University this July.

At the conclusion of the Sunday evening sessions which will begin on September 10, more training groups will be formed to spread the insights gained during this first awareness program.

The format of the program will be that of group discussion featuring a different authority each week. These authorities will represent the following areas: drug pharmacology, drug laws, police involvement, recreational programs, hospital procedures, school programs, adolescent psychology, and youth attitudes. It is hoped that this awareness program will not only involve the participants in the local drug problem intellectually and emotionally, but will also lead to some positive action.

Members of the "Help Communities Help Themselves" team are as follows: Lisa Breitenbach, Hazel Carr, William Farmer, Elliott Glansberg, Paul Scott, and John Welch. Dr. Nyles Crowner is Chairman of the Narcotic Guidance Council.

Don Campbell, left, who handled the dog, explained that rain hampered the search for mineral ore in this test run, as the canines work most effectively when the ground is warmer than the air—and not as damp as it was that day.

First time in continental U.S.

St. Joe tests dog's skill

"Sniffing out ore" became a reality last week when St. Joe Minerals, Balmat, became the first company in the continental United States to test the abilities of a specially trained dog in this innovative search for minerals.

Approximately nine years ago, dogs were first trained to recognize and search for sulphide ore in Finland, where this practice has met with marked success. The procedure spread to Russia and Sweden, and more recently to Canada.

In October, 1970, under the direction of Dr. H.V. Warren, Department of Geology, University of British Columbia, and Sgt. Paul Campbell of the Dog Detail, Vancouver Police Department, the training program in Canada was initiated. K-9 Syndicate was formed, with Bethlehem Copper, Dynasty Explorations, El Paso Natural Gas, Falconbridge Nickel and Keneco Exploration underwriting the budget of $8,000—later increased to $11,250—to train the dogs.

One of the two dogs trained and owned by K-9 Syndicate, Jai (Japanese for "boy") was brought to the St. Joe property by handler Don Campbell from Northern Ontario where they had been working.

Mr. Campbell (not related to Sgt. Campbell) explained that it takes from two to three years to train the dogs to seek out only sulphide rocks. The dogs have a working span of seven to eight years, although the enthusiastic Jai, just over two years old, has begun to wear down his teeth, which may need re-capping.

Conditions were less than favorable on Wednesday, when Don and Jai arrived after a trial run in the down-pouring rain over terrain known to be liberally sprinkled with sulphide samples. Jai was taken, unleashed, into an unexplored wooded area. Although the ground was thickly matted with leaves and underbrush, he quickly uncovered a rock which St. Joe geologists Don Grout and John Kreider identified as being rich in Pyrite, a sulphide of iron.

Campbell, a prospector from Vancouver, explained that rain will hamper the dog's mineral tracking, and that ideally the ground should be warmer than the air. Canines have been known to locate ore specimens lying as deep as four feet below the surface of the ground.

German Shepherds are most frequently used for this work, although others, including Labradors have been trained with success. Only male dogs qualify.

K-9 Syndicate has one other dog, Buddy. Rick Maynard, trainer of the dogs since the beginning of the project and Mr. Campbell handle the dogs while they are working. Man and dog have to become accustomed to working together to become a team, Mr. Campbell noted, and added that he and Jai were still learning to work together.

He first became interested in dog training through acquaintance with Sgt. Campbell, whose canine police are rated as second only to those of Scotland Yard. Sgt. Campbell, who helped initiate the program, still serves in an advisory capacity.

In Canada, the mining industry has shown acceptance of research and development of the dog-training program by the government. Government assistance is being sought, as it is felt the program will benefit the entire mineral exploration community.

Commenting on last week's experiment, Marvin Lane, Division Manager, noted that results were inconclusive. Ambiguous results were obtained. High humidity and rain were a detriment to a successful trial, and the dog, after a long plane trip, was not at peak performance.

Another test run, when the weather is cooler and hopefully dryer, is being considered.

Children sponsor carnival for Muscular Dystrophy fund

A neighborhood carnival against muscular dystrophy will be held on Aug. 31, Sept. 1 and 2 at 20 Bellevue Street.

The carnival, on the lawn of Mr. and Mrs. John O'Hearn, will be given by Timmy O'Hearn, John Mashaw and Cindy Curcuro.

Timmy will serve as ringmaster, assisted by Cindy and John.

The carnival, which begins at 1 p.m. each day, will feature such games as milk bottle drop, plate toss, penny pitch, a wishing well and lortune - telling and bowling on the green. There will be a play on the first day at 1 p.m. and all proceeds will go to aid the fight against dystrophy and related diseases afflicting millions.

The children got the idea for staging their event from Ronald McDonald who is promoting MDAA Carnivals on television and at local McDonald restaurants.

Last year, in cooperation with Muscular Dystrophy Associations of America, 28,143 carnivals were held by children across the country, and over $755,657 was raised for MDA's research and patient service programs.

Duck season opens Oct. 2

Albany, N.Y. (AP) — The state has announced the dates and bag limitations of this year's waterfowl hunting seasons, and the Environmental Conservation Department says prospects are excellent for all but three species.

The department announced Sunday that there will be a 60 day split season for ducks in most upstate sections, running from Oct. 2 through Nov. 20 and from Dec. 22 through Dec. 31. The basic bag limits will be three daily and six in possession.

In the Lake Champlain area, which usually follows the Vermont seasons, the dates are Oct. 7 through Oct. 15 and Oct. 28 - Dec. 7. The basic limits will be four a day and eight in possession.

Long Island will have a separate, 50-day duck season, Nov. 20 - Jan. 8, with general limits of five daily and 10 in possession.

Three species — canvasback, redhead ducks and brant — are in short supply and therefore fully protected, the department said.

Former residents to observe

50th anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Brooke Graves, former residents of this village who have been visiting here, will observe their 50th wedding anniversary tomorrow. Friends and neighbors are invited to call at 14 Carrouse Street tomorrow afternoon and evening.

ONE MORE FAMILIAR LANDMARK disappeared last week with the removal of this Park Street building which most recently housed the J&S liquor store. In trying to trace the history of the venerable structure, it was learned that it was built circa 1900 and first housed the Runyon Photo Shop as seen in the photo of '94 at left. It was later occupied by Will McGee for a shoe repair shop approximately 1913-1915 and later by Minckley McGee as an electrical appliance sales shop. Upon the repeal of prohibition, L.D. Sheldon opened a liquor store in the location and kept it until 1947 when John Green obtained the premises. John, shown with half-dismantled building at right, plans to erect a modern one-story building on the site.
