Sports Ensembles Indulge in Bold Color Contrast

Yellow cheviot featuring modernistic design in red, describes this striking sports outfit. Several style themes register in this swagger fall model, firstly the favor shown for Spanish colorings, nextly, the modernistic trend in the general scheme of design, thirdly the matching scarf which is supposedly to complete most every sports costume.

Keeping Curtains in Proper Shape

Here is an idea for keeping your lace or scrim, or Swiss curtains clean: Make one extra pair when you make the curtains. Then each week or each two weeks as necessary, take down one pair of curtains that are beginning to look soiled, and put up the extra pair instead. Wash the soiled pair and have them ready to put up at another window the next week or the second week after as necessity indicates, so that another soiled pair can be washed. Thus you have always clean curtains, you never have more than one pair to wash at a time, and you do not have that ugly spectacle of a curtainless house for three or four days while the curtains are laundrying. The only hitch in this plan is that your windows may not all be the same length. In this case you would have to have all the curtains made for the longest window, and then when they were used on the shorter windows you could turn over an extra fold and baste it in at the top, or you could have two extra pairs, one for the short windows and one for the longer ones. Either way would work out satisfactorily.

Green Pea Loaf.

Cooked peas rubbed through a sieve, one and a half cups, bread crumbs, one and a half cups of milk, one egg, slightly beaten, one slice of onion, chopped, salt and pepper to taste. Scald the milk, add the onion, bread crumbs, peas and egg. Season to taste. Bake in a buttered baking dish or timbale molds in a moderate oven until firm, about twenty minutes. Beans mashed carrots, fish or corn may be used instead of peas.

The Very Latest in Dresses

Dresses of woolen material are coming back into favor and the number of women who are definitely opposed ever to wear anything but silk next their arms is on the decrease. It is not so much that we have changed as that the woolen materials have changed. The light-weight woolens favored this season are as soft and smooth as silk. Next to wool jersey, there is no material better liked than wool crepe and never before have materials of this description been offered in more attractive variety. A great many of the new dresses, silks as well as woolen, are provided with a little piping of a light-toned silk crepe about the neck. Sometimes there is a collar of the light-toned silk. Always this touch of light silk ought to be made so that it may be easily removed and put back into position again, and the clever woman provides herself with a duplicate collar or piping so that when one is taken out to be washed another can be put in at once. But whether you wear silk or wool, and whether you wear it without some such dainty bit of washable silk or lingerie at the neck, you must remember that cleaning bills are necessary and that they should be given definite consideration in planning your dress budget.

Choosing Lights for the Home.

During the late fall and winter days lamps and lighting fixtures become more important items in the home. Before making new purchases it is well to decide on the needs of the home—lights that will add both to its comfort and decoration. The best artificial lighting arrangement is free from both gloom and glare. To prevent a glare the source of light should be concealed. Lamp shades which cover the bulb, frosted bulbs and indirect lighting are some of the means used. Adequate light should be planned for when the house is wired. This means providing plenty of plugs and places for fixtures, even if they are not to be used at once. A plug for every twelve square feet is a rule often suggested because such an arrangement allows for flexible system which provides the best decorative effects and the greatest comfort. The most useful lighting is usually the most decorative. Present day standards of simplicity and beauty demand simple rather than ornate fixtures and lamps and conservative designs rather than novelties. In the choice of lamps or lighting fixtures the effect rather than the article itself is more important. If a diffused light is desired an overhead fixture or one which directs the light toward the ceiling is needed; for concentrated light a fixture which directs the light downward may be used. It is often well, before deciding on a lamp, to try it in the room where it is to be used. Lamps in a room function as jewelry does to a costume, giving it interest, variety and color. They should be chosen to fit into their surroundings, especially the grouping of the furniture and not be too prominent.

Sausage for Supper.

Well, sausage for supper. That almost sounds poetic, doesn't it? But it will also sound very appetizing when you hear of some of the delightful ways of preparing it. Why restrict this delightfully flavored, wholesome food to the breakfast meal only? Here is one good way of prearing an appetizing dish: Use six good size tart apples and one cup of sausage meat. Scoop out center of apples, leaving thick shell and cut all pulp possible from the core. Chop this and mix with sausage meat. Refill apples, heaping filling and bake at 400 degrees F until apples are tender. Serve with baked or fried potatoes.

HELPFUL HINTS

Weather strips at windows will help cut down the coal bill.

A light lunch after school of milk, bread and butter, or fresh fruit is desirable for hungry boys and girls.

Remember that measles, mumps and whooping cough are communicable diseases and must be reported to the health officers.

Dried fruits are some of the best confections for children, because they contain valuable minerals and sugar in not too concentrated a form.

To remove stains on matresses cover them with a thick paste of laundry starch and soap jelly, allow it to remain until dry and then brush it off with a whisk broom.

A quantity of cookie dough may be mixed up and kept in the refrigerator to be used in small quantities as desired.

Left-over meals may be used to make delicious meat pie, croquettes, creamed meat on toast, stuffed vegetables and sandwiches.

When introducing new food in the child's diet, give only one food at a time and that in a small quantity, well cooked and nicely served.

To prevent flatiron marks from showing when ironing silk, place a piece of white paper between the material and the iron, moving it along the entire pressing surface.

Boiled milk has a tendency to stick to the pan in which it is heated. After removing it from the stove, pour out the milk and replace the cover immediately before the steam has a chance to escape. Let it cool, place the pan in cool water to soak.

To protect the top of blankets and quilts from being soiled, bind the edge with a piece of cheesecloth or other inexpensive material about sixteen inches wide which matches the blanket in color. When this is soiled it is very easily removed and laundered.

Most children and adults can be influenced by reason. The others were responsible for the invention of spanking.
