HAZARDS THAT ARE WORTH HEEDING

It would be a good thing if all automobile drivers were required to learn a little lesson concerning the potential destructive power of a moving car, and the great distances required to stop.

A car moving at the slow speed of twenty miles an hour requires 40 feet to stop under the best of circumstances after 4-wheel brakes are applied—and with the average driver, it will have moved 14½ feet before he is able to apply the brakes. At 30 miles an hour, it will go 22 feet before he applies the brakes, and another 45 feet will be required to bring it to a stop. If it is moving 40 miles an hour, the brakes will not take hold until the car has gone 29 feet, and 800 feet more will be covered before the car is stopped. At extremely high speeds these distances are increased many times.

How would you like to be in an automobile that has just leaped from a precipice one hundred or more feet high? You would be just as safe (at least until you hit the rocks below) as you are rolling along the highways mile after mile at customary road speeds. An automobile traveling 40 miles an hour has the same capacity for inflicting damage, or the same smash as it would have from a straight drop through the air 54 feet—and going 60 miles per hour, as if it were dropped 120 feet.

The automobile is one of the most useful, and one of the most potentially dangerous, of human inventions. Its safe operation requires constant caution, knowledge and regard for the rights of others. Because a percentage of drivers have lacked those qualities the highways of America see the unnecessary deaths of more than 30,000 people annually. Last year a slight improvement was registered—this year we can do a great deal more if we make the effort. It is a problem that is up to the individual driver, and its solution is in his hands.

Longest Epitaph Relates

Appreciation of Doctor

Some time ago there was found hidden in the cellar of an old house in the city of St. George, Bermuda, a large brass tomb tablet dated 1778. On it was found what is considered to be one of the longest epitaphs on record. It is also believed to be one of the most elaborate eulogies ever pronounced on a human being. Recording the good works of a well-known doctor of the times, the tablet, which was placed in St. Peter's, the oldest church in Bermuda, reads as follows:

To the memory of George Forbes, M. D. whose living a singular complacency of manners joined with many useful talents and eminent virtues. Rendered highly estimable, blessed with a convivial disposition, in the cheerful hour of social festivity he shone irreprehensible and an agreeable companion, ever assiduous in furthering good humor and the enjoyments of sociality friendly to mankind.

His endeavors to mitigate the evils of life which he bore himself with temper and philosophy were not alone confined to the healing art, long exercised by him with much reputation, but were likewise exerted in composing differences, restoring ancient friendships interrupted and promoting peace, harmony and mutual good understanding among his fellow men, having acquitted himself with approbation in the several relations of life.

As he had lived, respected and beloved, so he died, lamented and regretted for those virtues and many others which though not enregistered on this tablet are forever engraven on the loving memory of his surviving friends.

He died Jan'y 5th, 1778, aged 68 years.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Duties of Floor Leader

A floor leader is a member designated by his party caucus to have charge of the party strategy in the house of congress of which he is a member. He follows the proceedings carefully and accurately. In order to speak effectively when necessary. He has the duty of arranging the order in which other members of his party may speak on a given measure.

Thinnest Sheets of Gold

The thinnest sheets known to have been mechanically made of gold are 0.00001 millimeter thick. This would indicate that if a cubic centimeter of gold could be hammered out to the same thickness it would cover 100,000,000 centimeters, or 100 square meters, equivalent to about 120 square yards.

HOW TO USE SHRUBS ON HOME GROUNDS

"Find the shrub that answers, as nearly as possible, the requirements of the location to be planted. Too often a person starts with a predilection for a certain shrub, with the result that it gets planted in a place for which it is not suited," says Professor Alan F. Arnold of the Park Engineering division of the New York state college of forestry, Syracuse University.

"A common mistake is to put the shrubs where there is not enough room; many common ones attain a breadth of ten to fifteen feet. Also there is much difference between shrubs as to the density of foliage, the color, and the length of time they are in leaf. Then there is the question of special decorative effects—flowers, fruit or autumn color. Too much emphasis is apt to be given to flowers; it is often poor policy to sacrifice appearances during many months for a week or so of bloom. Last, though not least, there are the practical considerations of hardiness, sturdiness, rate of growth, soil requirements, care and cost.

"Let us take an example. We wish shrubs in the strip between the property line and drive on a city lot. The plants may be allowed to spread a little but they must be shrubs ordinarily no more than eight feet across. We want enough height, sturdiness and density to give our place some privacy and protection, and, in view of the conspicuous location, good foliage over a long period. Special decorative effects are not needed here. The growing conditions call for plants that are not particular and can be depended upon to make a strong growth.

"Looking over available shrubs, we might consider Acanthopanax pentaphyllum (not very shapely though), Japanese Barberry (hardly tall enough), Flowering Quince (not much of a foliage plant), Iboya Privet (somewhat broad), Rhodotypos kerrioides (none too dense and easily damaged), Rugosa Rose (not very dependable and needs some care), Spiraea vanhouttei (rather bare at the base), Enoxberry (not very substantial or high), and Weigela (rather coarse and apt to need attention). Iboya Privet seems, perhaps, the best choice though, in an actual case, some particular need might result in the selection of something else."
