The quarterly report of the Bethlehem Steel company for the three months ending September 30, showed a deficit of $5,425 724 as compared with a loss of $4,671 266 in the preceeding three months, and a deficit of $1,502,002 in the third qqarter of 1931, after all expenses including interest and provision for depletion and depreciation.

Men who believe in decisive methods are Representative Wesley Disney, Democratic candidate for reelection in the First Oklahoma district, and H. Franklin, who seattled a political argument with their fist sin the City hall at Tulsa recently. After Disney knocked Franklin down, he two shook hands.

A quick way to amend the Volstead act was outlined by former Governor Alfred E. Smith in a recent address in which he declared, "All you have to do is just add another section to it (the Volstead Act) and say, nohing herein contained shall be deemed to apply to malted liquros, and we will get beer and ale right away." "We don't have to pass upon the intoxication quality of it—just say the law doesn't apply to it."

High heels are blamed for the delusion held by many women that they are bowlegged when they really are not in the opinion of Dr. Emanuel Demeur of the Illinois Association of Chiropodist. High heels, he said, have caused the shins of many young women to turn outward, rotating the kneed. This gives the incorrect impression that they have bowlegs. Wearing of proper shoes in such cases will bring the legs back to normal.

Condemn Underhand Political Methods

Opponents Using "Whispering Campaign" In Attempt to defeat Offermann, Friends Avere.

Bitter condemnation of the "whispering campaign" in connection with political activities was made last Sunday from the pulpit of the Lafayette avenue Presbyterian Church, Lafayette and Elmwood Avenues, by Dr. Percival H. Barker, one of Buffalo's most eminent clergymen. The sermon of this distinguished minister i sparticularly applicable to the present campaign, because teh enemies of Frenk J. Offermann, Democratic candidate for Sheriff, have been resorting to the "whispering campaign" in thei rfrantic efforts to defeat him at the election polls on Tuesday November 8.

Mr. Offermann's private life is exemplary. He is married and the father of four beautiful children and his whole life is wrapped in thei rfuture. His uccess as a prominent business man is known throughout Buffalo, Wetern New York, and t hanetier KgHeahd New York and the entire country

Dr. Barker's severe criticism of the "whispering campaign" as reported in The Buffalo Courier-Express of Monday October 31, 1932, say, in part:

"The slanderer is especially active in the present political campaign. Men whose character is unstained, whose integrity is unimpeachable, whose service is unselfish, are denounced as though they were the most dangerous criminals. They suffer grievously at the hands of unfair newspapers, which have no colors except crimson and black.

Dr. Barker declared that slander not only robs victims of their reputation, but degrades the moral life of those who are guilty of it. "Slanderers," he said, "are altogether contemptible. How often have they come between you and your church? Sometimes they wear men's apparel, sometimes women's; they are the chief talkers in many social meeitngs, and, like the tails of Samson's foxe, they carry firebrand sufficient to set the whole community in a flame.

Upstate tour at an end, Mrs. Herbert H. Lehman, James A. Farley, Col. Herbert H. Lehman and Senator Robert F. Wagner return to New York.

ECONOMIC REFORMS PLEDGED BY LEHMAN

A wholesale slashing of unnecessary costs in state government, a firm but humane administration in the interests of all the people with special privileges for none and a vigorous application to the duties of the office--

That is the solemn pledge of Col. Herbert H. Lehman as he approached the close of the epoch-making campaign which party leaders aver insures his overwhelming election as Governor on the Democratic ticket.

HERBERT H. LEHMAN

"The people of this state have become accustomed to progressive government," Col. Lehman said. "They have become accustomed to honest and efficient government. They have become accustomed to the kind of government which they have had for the last decade. This program of social progress cannot be entrusted to the party which has tried to block it for so many years.

"That program will serve as the basis of governmental action after I am elected. To that my party is pledged. To that I pledge myself."

In expanding on the economies he proposes to introduce, the Democratic nominee promised to call a halt on all new activities save those of an absolutely indispensable or emergency character.

Specific Course

On this matter, he intends to be guided by the replies to three questions—is it necessary? can we get along without it? even if necessary have we the money to pay for it?

"My conception of economy," Col. Lehman explained, "is not the mere coining of a phrase, but an uncompromising fight against any waste, or corruption, or extravagance, and the elimination of all that is not essential or productive of specific economic and social progress.

"I pledge myself to the maintenance of this principle, and I promise that as long as I am Governor there will not be a cent of the taxpayers' money wasted or unnecessarily spent."

Col. Lehman's unqualified stand on this subject, coming as it does when the country is struggling to break the grip of depression, has struck a ready response among voters throughout every section of the state.

Because of his great financial knowledge, of inestimable value in these times, the people are flocking to his support in such droves that leaders are predicting a record plurality for him on November 8, as well as the National ticket in this state.

"Victory will not come only because of the natural resentment of our people toward the Federal administration for its sins of omission and commission contributing to this industrial crisis, and its failure to cope with the catastrophe as it developed," Col. Lehman states.

"It will come because of the confidence of the people that democracy will re-establish liberal principles of statecraft in Washington, and will continue them in the State of New York."

Employees of the De Witt Clinton Hotel, Albany, where Col. Herbert H. Lehman has resided during the four years he has been Lieutenant Governor, contributed a total of $100 toward Col. Lehman's campaign for Governor.

PUBLIC CONFIDENCE BIG WAGNER ASSET

Hailed as the champion of the underprivileged, a crusader in the war against unemployment, Senator Robert F. Wagner is bringing his campaign for reelection to an end with a pledge to continue fighting for the poor and needy.

His endeavors along this line in the past have brought him myriad assurances of success from all parts of the state

These expressions come not exclusively from Democrats but from people of all political faiths who see in the Senator's return to Washington the only hope for a speedy solution of the economic problems besetting amost every family and every home.

The splendid receptions accorded the Democratic nominee in his swing through the state demonstrate plainly the esteem and affection in which he is held by the people for whom he has labored in the more than twenty-five years of his public career.

These ovations reflect the human quality which has characterized that long and distinguished service, his well-known policy of approaching public questions from the standpoint of how they will affect the men, women and children of the commonwealth and his ability to sense the needs and requirements of the millions he so ably represents in the United States Senate.

Reelection Certain

Great as have been his achievements, the people realize that there is still much to be accomplished and that he must be returned to the Halls of Congress if the wolf is to be driven from the collective door and prosperity and happiness restored.

And it is this feeling which leaders are unanimous in saying insures Senator Wagner's reelection beyond the shadow of a doubt.

The Wagner record alone is sufficient to justify such confidence.

While the country was still basking in the wave of opulence, he saw the handwriting on the wall and began fostering bills to protect the unemployed when the crash came. He met the stern opposition of the Republican majority in Congress courageously, never wavering in the face of overpowering odds.

He succeeded in getting through measures providing that the Department of Labor collect and publish statistics of employment, providing that employment be stabilized through governmental building projects and providing for an investigation of unemployment insurance.

In addition, Senator Wagner was responsible for the Emergency Relief and Construction Act, devised to steady and restore business and overcome the wreck and havoc of depression.

He promises to resume with renewed vigor the fight for the unfortunate as soon as Congress reconvenes.

COLLEGE MEN SUPPORT LEHMAN

A College Men's League For Lehman to work for the success of the Democratic gubernatorial candidate has been organized throughout the state. The officers are Charles Harwood, chairman; Newman Levy, first vice-chairman; Roland Palmedo, second vice-chairman, and Daniel J. O'Sullivan, secretary.

TIME AND DISTANCE NEED NOT DIM OLD FRIENDSHIPS

"I'm so glad you called—its like a breath of fresh air to hear your voice. We've met few people here and to be honest about it we're just a little lonesome and a little homesick."

When old friends or relatives are forced to separate a tinge of sadness creeps in. But many people, young and old, have found an amazingly simple way to solve this problem. They keep friends close by telephone—they go to their children away at school by telephone—wherever friends or family are separated, the telephone is next best to visiting in person.

A call from you tonight would mean a lot to someone. And it's so inexpensive, especially with the reduced evening and night rates. You'll never miss the few cents it costs.
