in this vicinity. The event of the year was the death of a young man in the village. The young man was Mr. Jervis, then being about 22 years old. He was employed as a clerk in the office of Mr. P. J. Jervis, a well-known merchant in Port Jervis.

The young man was engaged in a business transaction when he was struck by a sudden attack of apoplexy. He was rushed to the nearest hospital, but the doctors were unable to save him. The young man was a popular and well-liked member of the community, and his death was deeply mourned by all who knew him.

A young lady who was present in the office at the time of the accident died later of the same illness. She had been engaged in the business of the office for only a short time, but she was already widely known for her intelligence and ability.

The funeral services were held in the Congregational church, and a large crowd attended. The service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. T. A. Jervis, and the Rev. Mr. J. B. Shepherd, of the Episcopal church, officiated. The remains were interred in the family vault in the cemetery near the church.

Mr. Jervis, who had been a prominent citizen of the village for many years, was a respected and well-liked member of the community. He was a man of great intelligence and ability, and his death was a great loss to the community.

The funeral was attended by many friends and relatives, who came to pay their respects to the young man and to join in the expression of sympathy for the bereaved family. The funeral was a solemn and impressive occasion, and it served to remind all who were present of the fragility of life and the necessity of living a life of virtue and worth.

Let us all strive to live a life of virtue and worth, and let us remember that the time we have left is precious and must be used wisely.

THE END OF A LONG LIFE IN UNREST

Mr. Jervis was a man of great intellectual capacity and a brilliant conversationalist. He was a man of great integrity and honesty, and his word was his bond. He was a man of great kindness and compassion, and he was always ready to help those in need.
