The Squad, due to its splendid reputation, was selected as the first in the township to receive the course. Congratulations to all the members of the Squad who are striving constantly to provide better and more experienced medical aid to the community.

Must Get Permit for Fire

Recently we have had several fires due to some careless burning. Whenever burning, whether it be leaves rubbish, etc. always secure a fire permit. The permit will not put out any fires, but if all of us follows the instructions printed on them, we certainly have fewer careless fires. There is now a $25. fine for persons caught burning without a permit, so let's all be careful when burning and obtain a permit. They are available at the firehouse.

Our annual Installation and Testimonial Dinner was held last week and enjoyed by all. Doesn't Bill Wamp look good? He certainly has made a remarkable improvement from his recent illness. Dick Reynolds is now home and would appreciate visitors. He says he feels fine, but has to take it easy for the next several weeks.

YMCA Total Goal Is $52,000—Advance Gifts Already $10,000

Huntington has long since established the fact that it is a YMCA community. It has always supported its Y. But now the time has come for explanation to keep up with the growth of the past few years. With those words Duncan M. Findlay, President of the Huntington YMCA gave more than 300 campaign workers at the 1954 fund drive "Kick Off" meeting May 28, at the 'Y' good reason for raising at least $15,000.

He pointed out that the total goal is $25,000, but $10,000 has been undertaken by the fourteen Men and Woman Advance Gifts Division and they are well on their way to raising it. The meeting which saw both horse-play and serious work was jointly presided over by Congressman Stuyvesant Wainwright and County Judge, Fred J. Munder, General Chairman and Master of Ceremonies respectively. Congressman Wainwright echoed Findlay when he told the volunteer workers, the Huntington YMCA has more calls from individuals, groups and clubs ask-

WAINSCOTT to WASHINGTON

by CONGRESSMAN S. WAINWRIGHT

The House of Representatives last week passed a new social security bill, which has been sent to the Senate for their action. I voted for the bill, as it gave a much needed increase in payments to our older people. It also liberalized the amount an older person may earn before going "out of bounds" on his or her social security.

However, one phase of this bill was, to me, not at all appealing. It will now be compulsory for farmers, lawyers and certain other groups to participate in the program. Were it technically possible, I would have struck the "compulsory" requirement for these groups from the bill. It does not seem proper to compel farmers and self-employed persons to join in this program.

It is more understandable for the ordinary worker to participate in a common cause. The farmer, lawyer or other self-employed person is in most cases his own boss. Under the American democratic concept of "free-enterprise," the employer or "boss" should properly take care of himself. I do not believe people should rely on the state for economic security. While I recognize a certain duty on the part of the state to protect the weak and the aged through social security, I deplore a further step which would tend to stifle initiative on the part of many of our citizens.

The strength of our governmental form lies in the fact that it allows a man to rise above his fellow men. We cherish "individualism." Yet, because of social changes in the Twentieth Century, the state has had to regulate and control the rules, so that one man will not trample down or injure other men in his rise to success.

But should the state provide complete economic security for farmers, the management class, and the self-employed? Does this not tend to cut down a man's desire to rise in the society in which he lives? If a man knows that his government will always care for him, he may well say: "Why save for the future? Why try to advance myself? The state will always take care of me."

RHODODENDRON WEEK AT CUTTING ARBORETUM

The Long Island State Park Commission in announcing that during the first week in June, rhododendrons would be in full bloom at the Bayard Cutting Arboretum at Great River, Long Island, states that these rhododendrons were originally obtained from nurseries in England and planted by the late William Bayard Cutting more than 50 years ago. Today the plants have matured into large clusters with brilliantly colored flowers. The plantings are all in naturalistic settings of hemlocks, holly, dogwood and similar trees and shrubs.

Although the rhododendrons are a special attraction at this time of the year, the main horticultural feature of the Bayard Cutting Arboretum is the Pinetum where fine specimen evergreen trees from all parts of the North Temperate Zone may be seen. Many of these evergreens were planted in the 1880's and some have now matured to 90 feet in height. In addition to the Pinetum walk there are special walks for those interested in wild flowers and a bird watchers walk along the river shore where both sea and land birds may be seen in great abundance. The entrance to the Arboretum is from the Montauk Highway at Great River on the south shore of Long Island about 50 miles from New York City. A restaurant and tearoom is operated in the former Cutting residence on the property.
