Organization Is Dairymen's Need

Speaker Ascerts Present Trend Makes Cooperatives Vital to Dairy Health

COTTAGE—"You need the cooperatives more than ever," William G. Pedlow, president of the Lone Star Dairy Cooperative, told the members of the Lone Star Dairy Cooperative Monday evening.

The the meeting was devoted to the discussion of the benefits of the cooperative system to the dairy producer.

Mr. Pedlow, who has been a member of the cooperative for 20 years, said that the cooperatives are vital to the health of the dairy industry.

He said that the cooperatives provide a means for the dairy producer to pool their resources and strength to achieve their goals.

Mr. Pedlow also discussed the importance of the cooperative in providing a fair price for the producer's milk and in providing a steady market for their products.

He stressed the need for the dairy producer to become involved in the cooperative system to benefit from its advantages.

Mr. Pedlow's talk was well received by the members of the Lone Star Dairy Cooperative, who pledged to support the cooperative system and to work to improve it in the future.

The meeting was a success, and the members of the cooperative are optimistic about the future of the dairy industry.

Freeport Scientists Acquire New Church

On October 18, 1961, the Freeport Church of Christ, a non-denominational congregation, acquired the Knights of Columbus Hall at 128 Main Street.

The church plans to use the hall for its weekly services, as well as for special events and social activities.

The church is located in the heart of Freeport's business district, and it is expected that the acquisition of the hall will benefit the community.

The acquisition was made possible by a generous gift from the Knights of Columbus, who have been long-time supporters of the church.

The church plans to hold a dedication ceremony in the near future, and it is expected that the hall will be open for public use shortly.

The church is grateful to the Knights of Columbus for their support, and it looks forward to using the hall to further its mission of serving the community.
